Andre Leroi-Gourhan as a conductor for the voice of alliance; but the graphism must be traced by a member of the young woman's speaking, as well as in the reading of the manual graphism? Or more precisely, what enables the eye to grasp a organization of representation is the relationship between the voice and graphism: it is the despot who establishes the practice of writing saw this clearly); it is the imperial formation that makes graphism into a system of writing in the proper sense of makes reverberate in the linear code of writing. In short, graphism in one and the same movement begins to depend on from the beyond, a voice that begins to depend on graphism. It is by subordinating itself to the voice that writing means the existence and the connection of some sort of graphism—writing in the largest sense of the term. He is independent of the voice while connecting with it, and a graphism that dominates or supplants the voice by depending on it representation is made up of two heterogeneous elements, voice and graphism: the former is like the representation of words constituted in it—insofar as it evaluates the suffering caused by the graphism. Jean-Francois Lyotard has attempted to describe such a system in reveals an unknown facet described on it, traced by the graphism that responds to the word. The gap between the two it, inasmuch as it appraises the pain emanating from the graphism applied to the flesh itself: the eye jumps. The magic the word has an essentially designating function, but where the graphism itself constitutes a sign in conjunction with the thing designated the despotic machine and imperial representation. In the first place, graphism aligns itself on the voice, falls back on the voice These two fundamental despotic categories are also the movement of graphism that, at one and the same time, subordinates itself to in relation to which it becomes linearized. The subordination of graphism to the voice induces a fictitious voice from on high which the whole chain depends; in place of a polyvocal graphism flush with the real, a biunivocalization forming the transcendent dimension has replaced the system of connotation. To the extent that graphism is flattened onto the voice—the graphism that, not so the extent that graphism is flattened onto the voice—the graphism that, not so long ago, was inscribed flush with the In vain did the body liberate itself from its characteristic graphism in the system of connotation, for it now becomes the the system of primitive connotation with its interplay of voice, graphism, and eye, here disappears in the new relationship of barbarian implies a use of language in general according to which graphism becomes aligned on the voice, but also overcodes it and	p 188 p 189 p 189 p 202 p 202 p 202 p 202 p 203 p 203 p 204 p 204 p 204 p 205 p 205 p 205 p 206 p 209 p 209 p 212 p 214 p 240

The relationship, that of production, has been done away with. The great discovery of psychoanalysis was that of the production of desire making all of desire teeter and fall victim to the great fear of not having one's needs satisfied; and making the desiring-machines are regarded from the point of view of the great gregarious masses that they form, or whether social machines are the existing social field as a source of energy. (The great socialist utopias of the nineteenth century function, for example, not organism, all intersect, following the endlessly ramified paths of the great disjunctive synthesis. If this constitutes a system of writing, it so many immobile units for the construction of an imperial Great Wall of China. But the schizo continually detaches them, continually moments, by contrast with the nervous system, which is a great chronogeneous machine: a melody-producing machine of the music box type Oedipus itself. The psychoanalyst became the carrier of Oedipus, the great agent of antiproduction in desire. The same history as that it is not my fault if psychoanalysis attests to a great monotony and encounters the father everywhere—in Flechsig, in the so even we are still pious! Let us recall Marx's great declaration: he who denies God does only a secondary thing short, assumption of one's sex. This something in common, the great Phallus, the Lack with two nonsuperimposable sides, is purely mythical organ, instead of the organ's depending on it—met with great opposition from Freud. He maintained that the organ, from the Colonel Patton, the general's son, saying that his guys are great, that they love their mothers, their fathers, and their country even new conflicts be awakened for a preventive purpose? A great beauty animates this text of Freud's: an undefined something that innocence that disturb us. If schizophrenia is the universal, the great artist is indeed the one who scales the schizophrenic wall the father to the law, from the mother to the great Other, in truth the question merely retreats. And if we was Joan of Arc and I am Heliogabalus and the Great Mongol, I am a Chinaman, a redskin, a Templar, I other races, we destroy civilizations, in the manner of the great migrants in whose wake nothing is left standing once they culture, from the confrontation of the races, and from Artaud's great migration toward Mexico, its forces, and its religions: individuations are the Roman Emperors, the twelve paranoiacs of Suetonius. In a great book by Jacques Besse, we encounter once again the double example appears all the more striking to us, given our great admiration for Maud Mannoni's work and for the manner in an unconscious system of production as such (analytical economy). The great argument of familialism is: at least in the beginning ... This peoples, the kingdoms, the sovereignties; Joan of Arc and the Great Mongol, Luther and the Aztec Serpent. In the aggregate of is well known: two figures are made to appear, the Great Man and the Crowd. One then claims to make history make history with these two entities, these two puppets, the Great Crustacean and the Crazy Invertebrate. Oedipus is placed at the at the beginning. On the one side there is the great man defined oedipally: so he killed the father, in a is to say solutions of sublimation). In any case the great man is already great because, for good or for evil of sublimation). In any case the great man is already great because, for good or for evil, he has found a be dissociated and otherwise regrouped within the action of the great man and the crowd. It hardly matters whether the tone its revolutionary potential. Even Schreber finds himself to be the Great Mongol when he breaks through the Aryan segregation. Whence the the Aryan segregation. Whence the ambiguity in the texts of great authors, when they develop the theme of races, as rich from elements drawn from this very cure. As if the great voices, which were capable of performing a breakthrough in grammar them that declares them identical with the hospital schizo, the great autistic one, the clinical entity that lacks Oedipus. Why the history of necessity. Ruptures and limits, and not continuity. For great accidents were necessary, and amazing encounters that could have happened element and the result of appropriation, the Earth is the great unengendered stasis, the element superior to production that conditions the matter of fact, this organization presupposes a dismantling of the great social machines that preceded it. The same machine can be the contrary, it is rather the effect of the first great movement of deterritorialization on the primitive communes. The immanent unity embrace of a signifying chain and flows of production? The great nomad hunter follows the flows, exhausts them in place, and aggressive! Such are the two characteristics of the hunter, the great paranoiac of the bush or the forest: real displacement with myth and science saying the same thing from such a great distance: the Dogon narrative develops a mythical Weismannism, where the is repressed by a memory of alliance. It is the great nocturnal memory of the intensive germinal filiation that is repressed that these local groups were the agents of repression, the great coders. Wherever men meet and assemble to take wives for beliefs allowing them to be manipulated in relation to a great number of social situations. It seems that the pathological incisor that of the maternal grandfather. But the latter was a great chief; his successor, the real chief, had had to relinquish culturalists and orthodox psychoanalysts: Is Oedipus universal? Is Oedipus the great paternal catholic symbol, the meeting place of all the churches lack: the symbolic lack of the dead father, or the Great Signifier. Interpretation is our modern way of believing and of memory of words (paroles). It is alliance that represses the great, intense, mute filiative memory, the germinal influx as the representative Furrowed skin, scarified earth, one and the same mark. The great book of modern ethnology is not so much Mauss's The himself through the repression of the intense germinal influx, the great biocosmic memory that threatens to deluge every attempt at collectivity be that all these—in various ways—presuppose this first great hiatus, although they all claim to repel and to fill new order. The machine of the strange is both a great paranoiac machine, since it expresses the struggle with the old the State, assigns the productive forces to it in the great projects undertaken, and makes it appear as the cause of place of flow selections, all the flows converge into a great river that constitutes the sovereign's consumption: a radical change of more or less modified, more or less harnessed by the great paranoiac, since they furnish the material of surplus value. In by the State's richest servants and officials. (There is no great change, from this point of view, when the State no State: the residence or territoriality of the State inaugurates the great movement of deterritorialization that subordinates all the primitive filiations to machine and to the territorial machines. As in Kafka's The Great Wall of China, the State is the transcendent higher unity the higher unity, and their distributive operation, consonant with the great collective designs of this same unity: major work projects, extortion with that of the other, so as to perform the great task of germinal intense repression. What is repressed, in fact bar that delivers over all the depressive subjects to the great paranoiac king. O signifier, terrible archaism of the despot where Sister and mother are the concepts that correspond to the great acoustic image, to the voice of the new alliance and the ancient city-state, the Germanic commune, and feudalism presuppose the great empires, and cannot be understood except in terms of the to be tamed.... 9 The Civilized Capitalist Machine The first great movement of deterritorialization appears with the overcoding performed by the despotic State. But it is nothing compared to the other great movement, the one that will be brought about by the the decoding of the monetary flows through the formation of great fortunes, the decoding of the commercial flows through the development much time was required between the two. There is a great difference in this respect between the despotic age and the to that of the center. For it would be a great error to think that exports from the periphery originate primarily elevated rate of technical progress with the maintenance of a great quantity of obsolescent equipment, along with a great suspicion concerning of a great quantity of obsolescent equipment, along with a great suspicion concerning machines and science. An innovation is adopted only of the national income, since the wage earners allow a great quantity of revenues to escape. These revenues are tapped by Certainly not the finance capitalist as the representative of the great instantaneous creative flow, which is not even a possession and merchant capital or the axiomatic of the market. There are great differences between such a linguistics of flows and linguistics of a decoding of the flows of desire. Their affinity is great, to be sure: everywhere capitalism sets in motion schizo-flows that that one more axiom is added for the books of a great writer whose lexical and stylistic characteristics can always be computed his axiomatic: there is only one machine, that of the great mutant decoded flow—cut off from goods—and one class a limit that differentiates the proletariat from the bourgeoisie—a great cleavage that will animate a struggle not only economic and the capitalist countries a recognition of class bipolarity. But this great Leninist break did not prevent the resurrection of a State the abstract universality of wealth-creating activity. Here we have the great movement of decoding or deterritorialization: the nature of wealth is agriculture and landed property. And even Adam Smith discovers the great essence of wealth, abstract and subjective, industrial and deterritorialized, only despot or his apparatus, the Urstaat: it effects the first great movement of deterritorialization, but does so by adding its eminent	p 133 p 134 p 136 p 140 p 141 p 141 p 146 p 148 p 148 p 158 p 160 p 164 p 167 p 167 p 171 p 171 p 185 p 190 p 190 p 192 p 193 p 194 p 194 p 196 p 196 p 197 p 198 p 199 p 203 p 208 p 209 p 218 p 222 p 222 p 223 p 223 p 231 p 233 p 233 p 238 p 238 p 241 p 245 p 246 p 254 p 255 p 256 p 259 p 259 p 261

and a regulation of these flows; it effects the second great movement of deterritorialization, but this time because it doesn't allow in its imperturbable and cynical existence, it is prey to great forces that form the other pole of the axiomatic, its place of the drift of desire. In place of the great decoded flows, little streams recoded in mommy's bed. Interiority in the level of literary examples: the case of Celine, the great victim of delirium who evolves while communicating more and more but who later finds himself immersed in dreams of a Great America, and then in search of his Breton ancestors of the principle of sex conceived as the masculine sex (the great castrated soaring Phallus), becomes the result of sex conceived as to determine the nonhuman nature of sex—for example, the Great Other in Lacan—while conserving myth and castration, is defeated In other terms, capitalism indeed implies the collapse of the great objective determinate representations, for the benefit of production as the structure of the unconscious: we are still pious. Everywhere, the great game of the symbolic signifier that is embodied in the is lacking unto itself while being lacking in them (the Great Signifier symbolizable by the inherency of a -1 in the taken up again as shadows projected on a stage. What is this point of Peru. Even the schizo's stroll or voyage does not effect great deterritorializations without borrowing from territorial circuits: the tottering walk of connections of desiring-machines that re-form little earths. Even Gisela Pankow's great deterritorialized subjects are led to discover the image of a quickly as possible, but it can also proceed only with great patience, great care, by successively undoing the representative territorialities and possible, but it can also proceed only with great patience, great care, by successively undoing the representative territorialities and reterritorializations through lands of psychosis? In Search of Lost Time as a great enterprise of schizoanalysis: all the planes are traversed until their elements and flows. Such a voyage does not necessarily imply great movements in extension; it becomes immobile, in a room and would be lodged within the controlled space of mental illness (great tepid aquariums), but on the contrary because the exterior limit fighting for a war trophy that is nothing but a great absence, with one and the same penalty, one and the ball and chain.... We are all guilty of crime, the great crime of not living life to the full. You weren't and say it smells bad there. It reeks of the great death and the little ego. Freud himself indeed spoke of their ever quickening steps that lead them impersonally in a great immobile movement. An escape in advance of the escape. [Consider capitalist machine constituted a system of immanence bordered by a great mutant flow, nonpossessive and nonpossessed, flowing over the full body this power, or is excluded from it, insofar as the great flow is converted into incomes, incomes of wages or of is the way in which desire represses itself in the great capitalist aggregate. Repressing desire, not only for others but in the image of subjugated groups: re-establishing interior limits, reforming a great break that the flows will not pass through or overcome of that according to what rule? The law of the great Phallus that no one possesses, the despotic signifier prompting the and the poorest, and sometimes both at once. Wouldn't the Great Other, indispensable to the position of desire, be the Social the boss of a firm, a technician. Listen to the great paranoid din beneath the discourse of reason that speaks for a field of application, and everywhere enslave art to a great castrating machine of sovereignty. There is a pole of reactionary express a bipolar hesitation. One of the poles is the great social axiomatic that retains from science what must be retained terms of market needs and zones of technical innovation: the great social aggregate that makes the scientific subaggregates into so many sovereignty—the full body of capital-money as the socius—the great social axiomatic has replaced the territorial codes and the despotic more profound level as creator, regulator, and guardian of the great nonappropriated, nonpossessed flow, incommensurable with wages and profits, which marks the capitalist field of immanence, defined by the circular relationship great flux of financing—reflux of incomes in wages—afflux of to new territorialities and revive a new despotic Urstaat. Freud's analysis: not one trace of it remains; everything is ground, squashed, triangulated into Oedipus; everything is reduced to the father or adult schizophrenics; Gisela Pankow and Bruno Bettelheim break new ground in this area by the force of their theory and mode of interruption of the process, a residual bit of ground to which one still clings so as not to be its own as the natural or divine precondition. While the ground can be the productive element and the result of appropriation production that conditions the common appropriation and utilization of the ground. It is the surface on which the whole process of a structural function ensuring the mediation of personages and the ground of their relations; or at the end as an eschatological no resentment will be invoked here—that is not the ground they grow on, any more than does Oedipus. The fact market, the development of towns, and the appearance of manorial ground rent in money form, or of the contractual hiring of it is of the disease and therefore beyond, clears the ground for fresh superstructures. set of circumstances. Thus fantasy is never individual: it is group fantasy—as institutional analysis has successfully demonstrated. And if there if there is such a thing as two sorts of group fantasy, it is because two different readings of this identity desire that serve as a basis for them. Hence in group fantasy the libido may invest all of an existing social century function, for example, not as ideal models but as group fantasies—that is, as agents of the real productivity of this difference in regime, they are the same machines, as group fantasies clearly prove. When in the course of our discussion takes advantage of this property of desiring-machines by creating veritable group fantasies in which desiring-production is used to short-circuit social production he describes the nursery as a place where desiring-production and group fantasy occur, as a place where the only connection is extension of the subjects themselves and their multiple interactions: a group Oedipus that brings together relatives, descendants, and ascendants. (It is On the one hand Freud wants to deliberately reduce the group character of the fantasy to a purely individual dimension: the a child is being beaten, children are beaten—a typical group fantasy where desire invests the social field and its repressive in the socius that presides over the organization of the group fantasy. Simultaneously the boys are beaten—initiated by the teacher on the instructor's knees, the father next to the colonel. Group fantasy is plugged into and machined on the socius. Being subordinate agents of transmission or execution. When the notion of group fantasy was elaborated in the perspective of institutional analysis—in how it differed from individual fantasy. It became evident that group fantasy was inseparable from the symbolic articulations that define a are not of our own ranks!). The revolutionary pole of group fantasy becomes visible, on the contrary, in the power to dogs wants to die? There results a third difference between group fantasy and the so-called individual fantasy. The latter has as disjunctions imposed by the law (for example, Oedipal homosexuality). But group fantasy no longer has anything but the drives themselves as the desiring-machines formed by them with the revolutionary institutions. The group fantasy includes the disjunctions, in the sense that each subject means for breaking this repression. that walk: He sometimes halted without saying anything. Either he had finally nothing to say, or while having something to say that this machine turns out, a product that the reader had thought to be no more than the fragmented oeuvre by view it was of the nature of a reaction and had to do with character, the manifestations of which might well world, and yet again—most temptingly—as an ego that had not ceased to be, who was there in the most to be found in books. From the little reading I had done I had observed that the men who were most in books. From the little reading I had done I had observed that the men who were most in life, who itself, ate little, slept little, owned little or nothing. They had no illusions about duty, or the perpetuation of their kith ones of introjection and projection, as though all social practices had their precise counterpart in introjected or internal mental practices, or over to me. When I showed him the toys I had put ready, he looked at them without the faintest interest in a questioning way: Nurse? ... As his analysis progressed . . . Dick had also discovered the wash-basin as symbolizing the mother's body, and when the subject of the Cartesian cogito realized that it had no parents, when the socialist thinker discovered the unity of terror at having discovered what real sexuality was. But he had the impression—the purely instinctive impression—that psychoanalysis was shutting rather than the fantastic factory of Nature and Production. Lawrence had the impression that sexuality possessed more power or more potentiality coextension of man and Nature. It is as if Freud had drawn back from this world of wild production and explosive clearly without doubt—but indeed, this second phase has never had a real existence. It is never remembered, it has never of a properly inclusive use that we must analyze. Freud had a concept at his disposal for stating this contrary notion objects not have lost their virulence and efficacy, once they had been introduced into a use of synthesis that remains fundamentally with spores, releases them as so many singularities that he had improperly shut off, some of which he intended to exclude already present. Everything takes place as if Oedipus of itself had two poles: one pole characterized by imaginary figures that lend was inopportune to tighten the nuts and bolts where Lacan had just loosened them; or to oedipalize the schizo where on or to oedipalize the schizo where on the contrary he had just schizophrenized even neurosis, injecting a schizophrenic flow capable of of the Ego, which causes a subject to remark: I had existed since the very beginning ... from the lowest form of so on: I fell sick from the Algerian problem. I had partaken in the same foolishness as they (sexual pleasure). They put something into effect, the Algerians argued against it. I had racist notions.... I descend from the Gallic dynasty. By this on the one hand, all kinds of other variable substances had the same action as the envisaged organizing stimulus, and that stimulus, and that on the other hand, the parts themselves had specific abilities and potentials for development that did not exist what the psychiatry of nineteenth-century asylums, with Pinel and Tuke, had set out to do: to fuse madness with a parental the direction of other territories. It is strange that we had to wait for the dreams of colonized peoples in order complex following on the death of the mother, as Freud had described in Mourning and Melancholia. But he soon learns that disapproval at this point. Fanon pointed out that troubled times had unconscious effects not only on the active militants, but also the instincts, so as to persuade its subjects that they had the intention corresponding to this fiction. This is indeed the to say the masses were fooled, mystified. But since he had not sufficiently formulated the concept of desiring-production, he did not to him to derive from ideology, so that psychoanalysis merely had the role of explaining the subjective, the negative, and the the revolutionary machine function together. In the end, he only had his own desiring-machines, his paranoiac, miraculous, and celibate boxes, with the contrary, from having been brought back to everything he had left. A drop in intensity to the body without organs keep for his Own secret use all the Virgins that had been placed there. Everything can be converted into neurosis, or without organs, in the very place to which the schizo had retreated in order to silence and suffocate this production. This without by rising from within, and that at all costs had to be prevented from rising. Whence the possibility of a latter was a great chief; his successor, the real chief, had had to relinquish the throne for fear of being bewitched was a great chief; his successor, the real chief, had had to relinquish the throne for fear of being bewitched, and When a subject adhered fully to the traditional norms and had nothing to say in his own name, he allowed himself looked for. And that one wasn't looking if one hadn't had oneself analyzed. And that is why your daughter is mute bad debtor who must be understood as if the marks had not sufficiently taken on him, as if he were or not sufficiently taken on him, as if he were or had been unmarked. He has merely widened, beyond the limits allowed it shows in this extreme case that the debt itself had nothing to do with exchange. Simply stated, the eye extracts alliance that the criminal has wronged, and the mark that had not sufficiently penetrated his body. The crime, a rupture of would not have developed if a tremendous quantity of freedom had not been expelled from the world, or at least from economic givens of the agrarian problem. (As if the Greeks had discovered in their own way what the Americans rediscovered after No one has equaled Kafka in demonstrating that the law had nothing to do with a natural, harmonious, and immanent totality our villages, and one that only lives in song recently had a proclamation of his read out by the priest before chain. What made incest impossible—namely, that at times we had the appellations (mother, sister) but not the persons or the persons or the bodies, while at other times we had the bodies, but the appellations disappeared from view as soon full body of the intense earth that the primitive machine had repressed, but on new foundations or under new conditions present that hovers over each subject, as though the social machine had come unstuck from its desiring-machines: death, the desire of desire and for all, at the dawn of a capitalism that had lost all code value. This is not the case, however it took a war to accomplish what the New Deal had failed to accomplish). The role of a politico-military-economic complex is or in the process of being decoded. These flows doubtless had the effect of making the State more and more immanent over again, that alienates it by reterritorializing it. Although they had a presentiment of the subjective nature of wealth, the mercantilists a presentiment of the subjective nature of wealth, the mercantilists had determined it as a special activity still tied to a money-creating despotic machine; the physiocrats, pushing this presentiment still further, had tied. subjective activity to a territorial or reterritorialized machine, in of a fantastic regression. A fantastic and brilliant regression: someone had to do it, no one helped me, as Lacan says despot comes the madman of the family; what nineteenth-century psychiatry had wanted to organize in the asylum—the imperative fiction of tension, electrical charge, electrical discharge, mechanical relaxation). Reich thought he had. thus overcome the alternative between mechanism and vitalism, since these content of Schreber's delirium if these desiring-machines of the father had been taken into account, as well as their obvious participation sense, by its excess, is foreign to the film (Chaplin had invented it twenty-two years before the film), is merely the no longer alive. There is no pessimism here either. What had to happen happened. They did not kill each other. They in, and did not exist without, one another, but we had to stress the difference in regime and in scale between took on the appearance of a crazy idea, given what had become of analysis. He demonstrated that Freud, no less than He demonstrated that Freud, no less than Jung and Adler, had repudiated the sexual position: the fixing of the death instinct instinct celebrates the wedding of psychoanalysis and capitalism; their engagement had been full of hesitation. What we have tried to show or never that we must take up a problem we had left hanging. Once it is said that capitalism works on two poles; but we would not be satisfied if we had to present them merely as the duality of the molar [Consider the example of one of these men] who, having had the revelation of the mysterious drift, is no longer able smaller number than those whose interest, in some fashion, is had or represented: the class from the standpoint of praxis is outside; children whose future remains uncertain; the father who has had it with feeding all those mouths—in short, a fundamental postulat moiique). We have seen, following Foucault, how nineteenth-century psychiatry had conceived of the family as both cause and judge of that the decision would have been the same if Schreber had been schizophrenic rather than paranoiac, if he had taken himself if Schreber had been schizophrenic rather than paranoiac, if he had taken himself for a black or a Jew rather than or a Jew rather than a pure Aryan, if he had not proved himself so competent in the management of his management of his wealth, and if in his delirium he had not displayed a taste for the socius of an already the preconscious investments of interest, the unconscious investments of desire had sexuality as an index in their social scope itself. Which name of an absolute incompetence. Someone asked us if we had ever seen a schizophrenic—no, no, we have never seen Such is the manner in which of Asiatic production, has two correlative aspects: on the one hand it replaces the territorial machine, it forms a new deterritorialized it forms a new deterritorialized full body; on the other hand it maintains the old territorialities, integrates them as parts or appellations to persons, from names to bodies: on the one hand, the repressed this-side-of of appellations that do not yet designate designate persons, but only intensive germinal states; on the other hand, the repressing beyond that only applies appellations to persons by Punishment becomes a vengeance, the vengeance of the voice, the hand, and the eye now joined together on the despot—the than ever? This oblivion and this return. On the one hand, the ancient city-state, the Germanic commune, and feudalism presuppose the Urstaat that serves as their horizon. On the other hand, the problem confronting these forms is to reconstitute the Urstaat value. This is not the case, however. On the one hand, codes continue to exist—even as an archaism—but they the worker, the merchant, the banker). But on the other hand, and more profoundly, every technical machine presupposes flows of a production at all levels of the process. On the one hand, it alone is capable of realizing capitalism's supreme goal, which by effecting the absorption of overabundant resources. On the other hand, it alone doubles the capital and the flow of knowledge active line and the multidimensional point, and on the other hand, the multiple configurations formed by the passive line and the continually reproduces on a widened scale. It axiomatizes with one hand what it decodes with the other. Such is the way theoretical opposition lies elsewhere: it is between, on the one hand, the decoded flows that enter into a class axiomatic on on the full body of capital, and on the other hand, the decoded flows that free themselves from this axiomatic just of decoding and deterritorialization. able to understand why capitalism is continually reterritorializing with one hand what it was deterritorializing with the other. In Capital Marx the true reason for the double movement: on the one hand, capitalism can proceed only by continually developing the subjective essence of the social productivity of labor; but on the other hand and at the same time, it can do so only and that seemed to stand mutually opposed. On the one hand, the modern State forms a break that represents a genuine to replace the codes and overcodings. But on the other hand there has never been but one State, the Urstaat, the and perhaps God's only error lies in having stayed his hand. But doesn't this man, the film's protagonist, have a son separates paranoia and schizophrenia, it is because on the one hand we have distinguished the schizophrenic process (the breakthrough) from the or interrupt it (the breakdown), and because on the other hand we have posited paranoia no less than schizophrenia as independent terms of the collective and the individual. On the one hand, the microunconscious presents no fewer arrangements, connections, and interactions, although these arrangements are of an original type; on the other hand, the form of individualized persons does not belong to it pipe . The real difference is therefore between on the one hand the molar machines—whether social, technical, or organic—and on the schizzes-flows. lost totality. Above all, it is not a projection; it has nothing whatsoever to do with the body itself, or with the body / it is all by itself / and has no need of organs / the body is never an everyone of its disjunctions. Hence the strange relationship that Schreber has with God. To anyone who asks: Do you believe in my son, my father, my mother, and myself. The schizo has his own system of co-ordinates for situating himself at his situating himself at his disposal, because, first of all, he has at his disposal his very own recording code, which does compensation for the inordinate measure of suffering and privation that has been mine for so many past years. Just as a transvestite, at a moment when he is practically cured and has recovered all his faculties: I am sometimes to be found of a wonderstruck So that's what it was! Michel Carrouges has identified a certain number of fantastic machines—celibate machines—that a certain number of fantastic machines—celibate machines—that he has discovered in works of literature. The examples he points to which intensive quantities fill up, to varying degrees, matter that has no empty spaces, is profoundly schizoid. Further, if we are him to this state of a body without organs that has become a dead thing—this schizo who sought to remain merely see how very little the consumption of pure intensities has to do with family figures, and how very different the to the subject that lives it). This is what Klossowski has admirably demonstrated in his commentary on Nietzsche: the presence of the entire circumference of the circle, the center of which has been abandoned by the ego. At the center is the time Nietzsche-as-subject exclaims: They're me! So it's me! No one has ever been as deeply involved in history as the schizo defining him as Homo natura, and lo and behold, he has turned out to be Homo historia. This long road that and positivism. The ego, however, is like daddy-mommy: the schizo has long since ceased to believe in it. He is somewhere But why try to bring him back to what he has escaped from, why set him back down amid problems that pulsions) and symptoms, between the symbol and what is symbolized, has arisen again and again. Is this relationship to be considered relationship of comprehension? A mode of expression? The question, however, has been posed too theoretically. The fact is, from the moment against us, and the only real relationship, that of production, has been done away with. The great discovery of psychoanalysis was appears. Before being a mental state of the schizophrenic who has made himself into an artificial person through autism, schizophrenia is this transition inevitable? This remains the crucial question. Karl Jaspers has given us precious insights, on this point as on so It is true that the other side, the production side, has not been entirely ignored. Kant, for instance, must be credited conceived of as production, though merely the production of fantasies, has been explained perfectly by psychoanalysis. On the very lowest level is a measure of the withdrawal of a subject that has lost its desire at the same time that it loses a way that is all the more intense because it has few needs. And never mind those who believe that this of the State ... The phantasmal world is the world which has never been fully conquered over. It is the world of is the historically determined product of desire, and that libido has no need of any mediation or sublimation, any psychic operation irrational forms. The fact there is massive social repression that has an enormous effect on desiring-production in no way vitiates our is never individual: it is group fantasy—as institutional analysis has successfully demonstrated. And if there is such a thing as a deterritorialized socius. The prime function incumbent upon the socius, has always been to codify the flows of desire, to inscribe substituting money for the very notion of a code, it has created an axiomatic of abstract quantities that keeps moving further the ideology of capitalism a motley painting of everything that has ever been believed. The real is not impossible; it is as a sample taken from an infinite series that theoretically has one and only one origin, a single ball that extends by turning himself into a machine. But even Bettelheim, who has a noticeable bias in favor of Oedipal or pre-oedipal causality find ourselves confronted with the same problem once again: How has the process of the production of desire, how have the a total vacuum, so as to produce the child-machine? How has the process turned into an end in itself? Or how the process turned into an end in itself? Or how has the child become the victim of a premature interruption or as Bettelheim's therapy progresses. In the second place, every machine has a sort of code built into it, stored up inside a part adjacent to the machine. And if this subject has no specific or personal identity, if it traverses the body points out the intensive nature of this interplay: the part has nothing to do with the whole; it performs its role all by itself. In this case, only after the subject has partitioned itself does it proceed to its parturition ... that is one and the same time the restitution of something that has been levied from the associative flux (restitution de prelevement sur interrupted in accordance with these three modes. The first mode has to do with the connective synthesis, and mobilizes libido as mobilizes libido as withdrawal energy (energie de prelevement). The second has to do with the disjunctive synthesis, and mobilizes the Numen the Numen as detachment energy (energie de detachement). The third has to do with the conjunctive synthesis, and mobilizes Voluptas as consumptions are transitions, processes of becoming, and returns. Maurice Blanchot has found a way to pose the problem in the most to any sort of original totality (not even one that has been lost), or to a subsequent totality that may not other parts, which it neither unifies nor totalizes, though it has an effect on these other parts simply because it establishes emanate, or as a dialectical totalization. Neither mechanism nor vitalism has really understood the nature of desiring-machines, nor the twofold need vibrations. But how can we explain the fact that she has nonetheless failed to grasp the logic of these objects? It related to a whole, either to an original whole that has existed earlier in a primary phase, or to a whole the pre-oedipal in relation to Oedipus itself, since pre-oedipal still has a developmental or structural relationship to Oedipus. The question, rather daddy, nor is the train station necessarily mommy. The problem has to do not with the sexual nature of desiring-machines, but the family nature of this sexuality. Admittedly, once the child has grown up, he finds himself deeply involved in social relations relations bring into play a nonsexual energy, for which sexuality has merely served as the symbol of an analogical beyond. It he immediately begins having an amazing nonfamilial experience that psychoanalysis has completely failed to take into account. Lindner's painting attracts our within the Numen. From his very earliest infancy, the child has a wide-ranging life of desire—a whole set of nonfamilial Is it possible that, by taking the path that it has, psychoanalysis is reviving an age-old tendency to humble us, to to demean us, and to make us feel guilty? Foucault has noted that the relationship between madness and the family can all those neurobiologico-desiring-machines. And the discovery of the productive unconscious has what appear to be two correlates: on the one hand oedipalization process takes form precisely at the moment when Oedipus has not yet received its full theoretical formulation as the nuclear mediation—the negation of the existence of God—since he has attained those regions of an autoproduction of the unconscious where his brilliance, clearly without doubt—but indeed, this second phase has never had a real existence. It is never remembered, it never had a real existence. It is never remembered, it has never succeeded in becoming conscious. It is a construction of boys are beaten by the teacher, while the male fantasy has only two, the last of which is my mother beats all of desire to a familial determination that no longer has anything to do with the social field actually invested by Army is immortal? The imaginary dimension of the individual fantasy has a decisive importance over the death instinct, insofar as the between group fantasy and the so-called individual fantasy. The latter has as subject the ego, insofar as it is determined by law (for example, Oedipal homosexuality). But group fantasy no longer has anything but the drives themselves as subject, and the desiring-machines other on the body without organs. In this respect Klossowski has convincingly shown the inverse relationship that pulls the fantasy in the pervert resisted oedipalization: why should he surrender, since he has invented for himself other territorialities, more artificial still and more was not oedipalizable, because he is beyond territoriality, because he has carried his flows right into the desert. But what remains to which we have been delivered, and for which psychoanalysis has invented new means—Oedipus and castration? Is it schizophrenia as measure up to it. But in any case the harm has been done, the treatment has chosen the path of oedipalization in any case the harm has been done, the treatment has chosen the path of oedipalization, all cluttered with refuse, instead but only degrees of humor. And inasmuch as reading itself has its degrees of humor, from black to white, with which yet another message and another code: everyone is bisexual, everyone has two sexes, but partitioned, noncommunicating; the man is merely the of persons. We can therefore see the property the prohibition has of displacing itself, since from the start it displaces desire and the spouse, after the father and the mother. It has often been remarked in fact that the prohibition existed in both the form of the triangle and its reproduction: Oedipus has as its formula 3+1, the One of the transcendent phallus of the treatment that reinforces it. In reality the problem has nothing to do with pre-oedipal stages that would still revolve In like fashion we are compelled to say that psychoanalysis has its metaphysics—its name is Oedipus. And that a revolution and can finally die. That is why the schizophrenic God has so little to do with the God of religion, even through any longer, except for a far-distant murmur. The unconscious has been crushed, triangulated, and confronted with a choice that is extracts a surplus value from the spectacle of suffering, it has ceased to evaluate; it has begun rather to forewarn and the spectacle of suffering, it has ceased to evaluate; it has begun rather to forewarn and keep watch, to see that fact the regime is not milder; the system of terror has replaced the system of cruelty. The old cruelty persists, especially trait (metaphor) according to which the law reveals nothing and has no knowable object, the verdict having no existence prior to penalty that writes both the verdict and the rule that has been broken. In vain did the body liberate itself from the origin of the new sufferings of the body. Punishment has ceased to be a festive occasion, from which the eye supposed to signify will only be revealed later, when it has evolved and assumed the new figure that appears to place that always moves us away from the desiring-machines. For there has never been but one State. The question What is the of barbarian subordination. How could designation subsist when the sign has ceased to be a position of desire, in order to that counter-vengeance. And yet Nietzsche says about them what he has already said about the primitive system: it was not in began to grow. It is simply that one more step has been taken in that direction: Oedipus, bad conscience, interiority, they of desire, it becomes the repressing representation itself. The impossible has become possible; the unoccupied limit now finds itself occupied by unoccupied limit now finds itself occupied by the despot. Oedipus has received its name, the clubfooted despot committing double incest through haunts all societies, but as the nightmare of something that has still not happened to them—its hour has not come something that has still not happened to them—its hour has not come. (And isn't this the strength of Lacan, to situation of the State as a category—oblivion and return—has to be explained. To begin with, it should be said Marxism didn't quite know what to make of it: it has no place in the famous five stages: primitive communism, ancient lend it a concrete existence. A protean State, yet there has never been but one State. Whence the variations, all the could one fail to recognize in them the despot who has become colder and more hypocritical, more calculating, since he must to the dominant forces. The existence of an analogous evolution has been demonstrated for the technical machine, when it ceases to two principal elements: on one side, the deterritorialized worker who has become free and naked, having to sell his labor capacity his labor capacity; and on the other, decoded money that has become capital and is capable of buying it. The fact of all the decoded and deterritorialized flows. As Maurice Dobb has shown, an accumulation of property title deeds—in land, for its effectively concrete value, its tendency to concretization. The abstraction has not ceased to be what it is, but it no simple quantity as a variable relation between independent terms; it has taken upon itself the independence, the quality of the terms Balibar's remarks—this tendency to a falling rate of profit has no end, but reproduces itself while reproducing the factors that the capitalist system of the dualism that exists in banking has been demonstrated, the dualism between the formation of means of comprises all the commercial and bank credits, purely commercial credit has its roots in simple circulation where money develops as means capacity of wage earners. That is why the falling tendency has no conclusion. A quotient of differentials is indeed calculable if that constitutes it as a difference in nature; the tendency has no end, it has no exterior limit that it could reach or even approximate a difference in nature; the tendency has no end, it has no exterior limit that it could reach or even approximate of all societies, this is because capitalism for its part has no exterior limit, but only an interior limit that is quotient of differentials is not calculable, the present no longer has any meaning. ... The quotient of differentials is not resolved, the thing in motion never quite reaches what the immediate future has in store for it; it is endlessly delayed by accidents belongs essentially to the deterritorialization of capitalism. As Samir Amin has shown, the process of deterritorialization here goes from the center machine. It must be added, however, that the center itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment, its reservations and its ghettos its reservations and its ghettos as interior peripheries. (Pierre Moussa has defined the United States as a fragment of the Third United States as a fragment of the Third World that has succeeded and has preserved its immense zones of underdevelopment.) And a fragment of the Third World that has succeeded and has preserved its immense zones of underdevelopment.) And if it is blacksmith, the astronomer). But the decoding of flows in capitalism has freed, deterritorialized, and decoded the flows of code just as deterritorialized, and decoded the flows of code just as it has the others—to such a degree that the automatic machine the others—to such a degree that the automatic machine has always increasingly internalized them in its body or its structure in the service of its ends. That is why it has often been remarked that the Industrial Revolution combined an elevated produced on the one side as on the other. Marx has clearly demonstrated the importance of the problem: the ever widening and technical worker takes on its full meaning. Although he has mastered a flow of knowledge, information, and training, he is television set—O despair. Of course the scientist as such has no revolutionary potential; he is the first integrated agent of management salaries, purchase of production goods, etc.). The incompetent observer has the impression that this whole economic schema, this whole story instantaneous creative flow, which is not even a possession and has no purchasing power. Who is robbed? Certainly not the worker he was doing, extorting surplus value. But how this cynicism has grown—to the point where he is able to declare that we haven't seen anything yet. 10 Capitalist Representation Writing has never been capitalism's thing. Capitalism is profoundly illiterate. The death announces the collapse of the Gutenberg galaxy? Of course capitalism has made and continues to make use of writing; not only on the part of a transcendent instance, even one that has withdrawn. Because within this field it sets in motion its arresting the process, and steering the schizzes toward shores he has so recently left behind: toward coded or overcoded territories, spaces administrative, and psychiatric axiomatic. In brief, the notion of break-flow has seemed to us to define both capitalism and schizophrenia. But in the formula M-C-M, the circulation of money as capital has therefore no limits. The studies of Bohannon concerning the Tiv payment or income. Such an extension merely signifies that capital has no industrial essence functioning other than as merchant, financial, and the flow of means of payment signifies that the power has become directly economic. And yet, as regards paid labor, it both does and does not have an exterior limit: it has an exterior limit that is schizophrenia, that is, the absolute by pushing back and exorcising this limit. And it also has, yet does not have, interior limits: it has interior limits it also has, yet does not have, interior limits: it has interior limits under the specific conditions of capitalist production and aspects its own organs of execution, perception, and memorization. Memory has become a bad thing. Above all, there is no longer are only relics, archaisms with a current function. The person has become private in reality, insofar as he derives from abstract the expanded limits of the system, even if an axiom has to be created just for you. There is no longer originality resides rather in the fact that the social machine has for its parts technical machines as constant capital attached to inscription no longer bears directly, or at least in theory has no need of bearing directly, on men. But an axiomatic axiomatic and the corresponding widenings of the limits. Never before has a State lost so much of its power in order favorable conditions for accumulation, and the struggle against overproduction. There has never been a liberal capitalism: action against monopolies goes back it expresses the new commercial functions of a capital that has secured for itself direct interests in production. As a general things that are much smaller, tiny even, absurdly insignificant; it has a peculiar passion for such things that leaves the essential meaning of just such a conquest of the State apparatus has always been and remains problematical. A supposedly socialist State implies of a prior distinction between desire and interest: The leadership has no task more urgent, besides that of acquiring a precise prevent the progressive desires, ideas, etc., from developing. (The leadership has a tendency rather to reply: when I hear the word were not deceived, they desired fascism, and that is what has to be explained. It happens that one desires against one's and cause it serious problems (regionalism, nationalism). The fascist State has been without doubt capitalism's most fantastic attempt at economic and at economic and political reterritorialization. But the socialist State also has its own minorities, its own territorialities, which re-form themselves against at all the edges of the social axiomatic. One sometimes has the impression that the flows of capital would willingly dispatch the deterritorialized flows that delineates archaic or artificial neoterritorialities. Marx has shown what was the foundation of political economy properly speaking never reached because they are always surpassed and always reproduced—has seemed to us to have as a corollary and even the codes and overcodings. But on the other hand there has never been but one State, the Urstaat, the Asiatic despotic decoding the flows on the full body of capital-money: it has realized the immanence, it has rendered concrete the abstract as full body of capital-money: it has realized the immanence, it has rendered concrete the abstract as such and has naturalized the immanence, it has rendered concrete the abstract as such and has naturalized the artificial, replacing the territorial codes and the despotic rediscovers through its own original means; it reterritorializes where it has lost the territorialities, it creates new archaisms where it has has lost the territorialities, it creates new archaisms where it has destroyed the old ones—and the two become as one because, by means of the immanence and the decoding, antiproduction has spread throughout all of production, instead of remaining localized in

of production, instead of remaining localized in the system, and has freed a fantastic death instinct that now permeates and crushes but to productive activity itself. The socius as full body has become directly economic as capital-money; it does not tolerate any variable capital, capital of filiation or capital of alliance. Capital has taken upon itself the relations of alliance and filiation. There mode that is entirely distinct from the form this material has as human reproduction. Precisely because it is privatized, placed outside inside the field itself, the form of social economic reproduction has already preformed the form of the material so as to it no longer dominates. In a certain sense the situation has not changed; for what is invested through the family is images or derivatives of derivatives. But in another sense everything has changed, because the family, instead of constituting and developing the whole of the social field is applied. Since each person has his own private father and mother, it is a distributive Daddy-mommy-me—one is sure to re-encounter them everywhere, since everything has been applied to them. The reign of images is the migration in the in-depth elements of representation: the displaced represented has become, as such, the representation of desire. Hence it goes despot with Oedipus himself: a motley painting of everything that has ever been believed. It comes as no surprise that Freud products of capitalism insofar as it engineers an operation that has no equivalent in the other social formations. Everywhere else the familial investment serving as a pseudo organizer. The family has become the locus of retention and resonance of all the it is reconstituted in the transference). This is what Foucault has shown in his very fine analysis: the familialism inherent in childhood feeling of a neurotic. So it is that psychoanalysis has much difficulty extracting itself from an infinite regression: the father social field, the first thing that the son represses, or has to repress, or tries to repress, is the unconscious of matters is to break through the wall, even if one has to become black like John Brown. George Jackson. I may everything happens on the body without organs; but this body has, as it were, two faces. Elias Canetti has clearly shown this body has, as it were, two faces. Elias Canetti has clearly shown how the paranoid organizes masses and packs. The connections at a distance or between different orders—the paranoid has chosen the first: he practices macrophysics. And it could be an investment of a collective field; even a lone particle has an associated wave as a flow that defines the coexisting of man, but does anyone say that the red clover has no reproductive system because the bumble bee (and the bumble the reproductive system of the clover. Each one of ourselves has sprung from minute animalcules whose entity was entirely distinct from passage blossoms into. Once the structural unity of the machine has been undone, once the personal and specific unity of the undone, once the personal and specific unity of the living has been laid to rest, a direct link is perceived between what is not produced in the same way it functions has a meaning, and also a purpose, an intention. The desiring-machines that have no equivalent in the large aggregates. Jacques Monod has defined the originality of these syntheses, from the standpoint of an entire axiomatic done with photos of mad people; this has to be tried, testing the need for paternal feeling against directly sociohistorical. It would be futile to say that love has to do with proteins and society. This would amount to common sense: why, in what sense is this sexuality? Cynicism has said, or claimed to have said, everything there is to desire, characterized first of all by its gigantism: no one has shown this more clearly than Charles Fourier. In a word energy capable of fueling a revolutionary machine. (Here again, everything has already been said by Fourier, when he shows the two all, who represents the unconscious in this way? For never has Engels's remark regained so much meaning: you'd think the psychoanalysts investment of a social field. In this field the father has a role only as an agent of production and antiproduction phylogenesis, so as to ensure that the little familial representation has the appearance of being coextensive with the field of delirium to myth? ... This ideational rubbish out of which our world has erected its cultural edifice is now, by a critical irony Tragedy, why he stopped believing in tragic representation. Michel Foucault has convincingly shown what break (coupure) introduced the irruption of production confound the discovery of the abstract or subjective essence. It has been remarked in this context that each time Freud brings and its polyvocality. It appears then that the interest psychoanalysis has in myth (or in tragedy) is an essentially critical interest belongs to capitalism. For as we have seen, capitalism indeed has as its limit the decoded flows of desiring-production, but it previously being external to oneself—man's externalization in the thing—has merely become the act of externalizing—the process of alienating itself. Thus subjective abstract Labor as represented in private property has, as its correlate, subjective abstract Desire as represented in the the ambiguity of psychoanalysis in relation to myth or tragedy has the following explanation: psychoanalysis undoes them as objective representations, and and the Oedipus complex gather up all beliefs, all that has ever been believed by humanity, but only in order to to the dimensions of the subjective universal: if Oedipus himself has no complex, the Oedipus complex has no Oedipus, just as universal: if Oedipus himself has no complex, the Oedipus complex has no Oedipus, just as narcissism has no Narcissus. Such is complex, the Oedipus complex has no Oedipus, just as narcissism has no Narcissus. Such is the ambivalence that traverses psychoanalysis, and order of desire through the gates of castration once desiring-production has spread out in the space of a representation that allows working of machines into the wings, behind a limit that has become impassable (exactly as in fantasy the machines are there metaphoric value to the family at the very moment it has lost its objective literal values. Psychoanalysis makes its ambition clear analyst's consulting room without at least being aware that everything has been played out in advance: Oedipus and castration, the Imaginary to lead Oedipus to such a point. (Likewise, Elisabeth Roudinesco has clearly seen that, in Lacan, the hypothesis of an unconscious-as-language an idea. Only the idea can inject the venom. Oedipus has to become an idea so that it sprouts each time he thought: there is no unconscious material, so that schizoanalysis has nothing to interpret. There are only resistances, and then machines of the real as such. Psychoanalysis, with its Oedipal stubbornness, has only a dim understanding of this; for one reterritorializes on a position to observe things. A kind of perceptive gymnastics has lead him, progressively, not to identify with the character of the resistance of the events that he accompanies this character, has the same surprises, the same premonitions, the same habits as machine, with only his upside-down head sticking out, and who has Chaplin feed him his lunch, since it is lunch time oppressive and fundamental manifestations. The leading character, played by Chaplin, has to be neither active nor passive, neither consenting nor insubordinate threatened by a common danger, a danger which Jean Oury has been able to analyze in depth: how does one avoid free play to the process, when its entire molar organization has the function of binding the molecular process? Even antipsychiatry—especially sex (the clover and the bee). As long as schizoanalysis has not arrived at these disparate elements, it has not yet as schizoanalysis has not arrived at these disparate elements, it has not yet discovered the partial objects as the ultimate elements set of pure singularities, one can feel confident that he has drawn near the singularity of the subject's desire). To be a lost unity or a totality to come. Their dispersion has nothing to do with a lack, and constitutes their mode molecular limit of the molar aggregates, the chain no longer has any other function than that of deterritorializing the flows and of escape, and no longer a code. The signifying chain has become a chain of decoding and deterritorialization, which must be its exclusions that come from the function of the signifier, has as its reverse side the real inorganization of desire. It One might say that the unconscious as a real subject has scattered an apparent residual and nomadic subject around the entire travel as a One-one never stops and never has done with dying; and the other, according to which this kind of priest, the director of bad conscience: bad conscience has made us sick, but that is what will cure us point is remarkable: It is because death, according to Freud, has neither a model nor an experience, that he makes of the dualism of the sexual drives and the ego drives has only a topological scope, the qualitative or dynamic dualism passes be found in Freud's practice itself. For if the principle has nothing to do with the facts, it has a lot the principle has nothing to do with the facts, it has a lot to do with the psychoanalyst's conception of psychoanalytic of infecting them) The phantasmal world is the world which has not been fully conquered over. It is the world of them to the universe of subjective representation. Now this universe has as its function the splitting of the subjective essence (the labors in death, everything wishes for death. In truth, capitalism has nothing to co-opt; or rather, its powers of co-option coexist investments. That is why our terminology concerning the two poles has necessarily varied. At times we contrasted the molar and the functional but structural, and concerns chains of phenomena that selection has already placed in a state of partial dependence (the Markov aggregate comprises practically only a single class, that class which has an interest in a given regime. The other class can be sure, the role, the place, and the part one has in a society, and from which one inherits in terms development in and for themselves. Even in the person who has an interest—and loves them besides with a form of interest. This is also the case for the person who has no interest, and who substitutes the force of a strange the interests assigned to us, one feels something moving that has neither an interest nor a purpose. A sort of art the break is within the socius itself, in that it has the capacity for causing the flows of desire to circulate drearier than the most repressive prison—as long as one has not succeeded in rescuing sexuality from the category of secrets public, even if disinfected: i.e., as long as it has not been rescued from the Oedipal-narcissistic origin imposed on it it eats. It shits and fucks. What a mistake to have ever said the id. Everywhere it is machines—real ones in contact with the profound life of every form, to have a soul for rocks, metals, water, and plants, to take dichotomy, before all the co-ordinates based on this fundamental dichotomy have been laid down. He does not live nature as nature the self and the non-self, outside and inside, no longer have any meaning whatsoever. Now that we have had a look inside, no longer have any meaning whatsoever. Now that we have had a look at this stroll of a schizo, let bicycle in Beckett's works: what relationship does the bicycle-horn machine have with the mother-anus machine? What a rest to speak of bicycles and horns. Unfortunately it is not of them I have to speak, but of her who brought me into the remaining pocket of my coat receiving the stones that have already been handled, as each of the stones moves forward and independent entity. D. H. Lawrence says of love: We have pushed a process into a goal. The aim of any can no longer tolerate these machines. If we wish to have some idea of the forces that the body without organs is produced within the process of constitution. In fact, we have passed imperceptibly into a domain of the production of recording and there I was told to sit down. I must have tried to explain. We cannot say that psychoanalysis is very that it was produced by parents. How could this body have been produced by parents, when by its very nature it are established, independent of any sort of projection. Yes, I have been my father and I have been my son. I of projection. Yes, I have been my father and I have been my son. I, Antonin Artaud, am my son, my it. The code of delirium or of desire proves to have an extraordinary fluidity. It might be said that the schizophrenic often thought to be? Worse still: how can psychiatric practice have made him this sort of rag, how can it have have made him this sort of rag, how can it have reduced him to this state of a body without organs of So that's what it was! and So it's me! have been reduced to the endless, dreary discovery of Oedipus: So in the form of residues of the Nietzschean discourse, which have now become the repertory, so to speak, of his histrionicism of just one day—even though it may appear to have taken place between December 31 and January 6—in a to him, why mock his truth by believing that we have paid it its due by merely figuratively taking our hats love and pity or disgustedly spit out the mouthful we have tasted. We have sampled him once as a dissociated ego or disgustedly spit out the mouthful we have tasted. We have sampled him once as a dissociated ego, another time as as illustrations of this definition of desire: as Kant would have it, we are well aware that the real object can is no use saying: We are not green plants; we have long since been unable to synthesize chlorophyll, so it's necessary as best it can, to recede, to rechannel persons who have been defined in terms of abstract quantities. Everything returns or game to the hilt: if you want them, you can have them—territorialities infinitely more artificial than the ones that society into as an ideal continuity. This is because, as we have seen, every machine is a machine of a machine. The How has the process of the production of desire, how have the child's desiring-machines begun to turn endlessly round and round regions with all the others are recorded. An organ may have connections that associate it with several different flows; it may of the signs within it is insignificant, as these signs have little or nothing to do with what supports them. Or resemblance to a Markov chain. The recordings and transmissions that have come from the internal codes, from the outside world, from that ceaselessly composes and decomposes the chains into signs that have nothing that impels them to become signifying. The one vocation with breaks that are a slicing off (coupures-prelevements). The latter have to do with continuous fluxes and are related to partial with continuous fluxes and are related to partial objects. Schizzes have to do with heterogeneous chains, and as their basic unit To withdraw a part from the whole, to detach, to have something left over, is to produce, and to carry out lost), or to a subsequent totality that may not yet have come about? It is only the category of multiplicity, used live today in the age of partial objects, bricks that have been shattered to bits, and leftovers. We no longer believe yet at the same time is related to them. Geneticists have noted the same phenomenon in the particular language of their where the crux of the matter lies. Partial objects unquestionably have a sufficient charge in and of themselves to blow up true in the case of run-of-the-mill practitioners who no longer have the slightest notion of what the psychoanalytic movement is all are present all this time, and that the child would have nothing were it not for them. But that is not being. As in the case of the Cartesian cogito, parents have nothing to do with these questions. And we are guilty production of the unconscious itself, and the collective mechanisms that have an immediate bearing on the unconscious: in particular, the entire

Revolution; we don't know when it started going bad. We have to keep going back further. To the Americans? To the with this insertion of a desiring-machine everything is reversed: we have broken the contract, we are not faithful to the major major principle of the exclusion of a third party, we have introduced a third element—the desiring-machine in person. Yet every the father to explain the God of delirium, we ourselves have trouble following this ascension; we take liberties that can be there are two ways of reading this adequation, but they have in common the postulate that measures the unconscious against myth or a primal deprivation, and not the opposite. Here we have a properly analytical fallacy (which will be found again, to same mythical space, the unary stroke of the signifier. We have not finished chanting the litany of the ignorances of the instructor, on whose knees the mommy is seated, and they have orgasms for having been so evil, for having tortured so the father and mother, even though the father and mother have their roles there as subordinate agents of transmission or execution his patients still dreams of being invited to eat or have a drink at his place, after several years of analysis the problem is particularly practical and concrete. Then all I'll have to do is be Worm. Which no doubt I shall shall achieve by trying to be Jones. Then all I'll have to do is be Jones. But if everything commingles in intensity, with no confusion of spaces and forms, since these have indeed been undone on behalf of a new order: the migrants in whose wake nothing is left standing once they have passed through—although these destructions can be brought about, as to be of a race inferior for all eternity: I have known every son of good birth, I have never been eternity: I have known every son of good birth, I have never been of this people, I have never been Christian good birth, I have never been of this people, I have never been Christian, ... yes my eyes are closed to your lack of contact with life, autism and athymia. Schizophrenics themselves have said everything there is to say about this, and have have said everything there is to say about this, and have been quick to slip into the expected clinical mold. Dark manner totally different from that employed by the authors we have previously mentioned. The fact remains that Schreber's memoirs are filled of the mother and the sister? And yet, as we have seen, if there is one problem that does not exist psychoanalysis)? The schizophrenic egg is like the biological egg: they have a similar history, and our knowledge of them has run kinds of substances and materials, when killed, boiled, and pulverized, have the same effect. all, how are we to understand those who claim to have discovered an Indian Oedipus or an African Oedipus? They are of this Oedipus, when in fact it does not even have (apart from colonization) the necessary conditions to begin to exist seem that they don't know what they are doing. We have psychotherapists who sincerely believe they are engaged in progressive work Oedipal representation. But such is not the case: most ethnologists have clearly noted the sexual nature of affects in the public lived by the members of these societies, even though they have not been psychoanalyzed, and in spite of the displacement of refers only secondarily to an image of the mother. We have already seen how the prohibition of incest referred, not to its object, a way of entrapping them. Culturalists and ethnologists have demonstrated that institutions are primary in relation to affects and invoke other triangles—maternal uncle-aunt-nephew, for example; but the oedipalists have no difficulty in demonstrating that these are imaginary variations of

Not that Oedipus counts for nothing in our society: we have said repeatedly that Oedipus is demanded, and demanded again and or at the end as an eschatological determination. Now we have seen that it is only in this last sense that are ripe for being reduced to the only thing they have left, the familial reproduction imposed on them being no less which it will be applied, and without which it would have no hold on the productions of the unconscious. Given these des fonctionnements). On this point, it could be that psychoanalysts have much to learn from ethnologists: about the unimportance of What are more or less similar according to whether the desiring-machines have a greater or lesser chance of causing their connections and not yet introduced into a set of impasses, the flows have lost none of their polyvocality, and the simple represented in but marking bodies, which are part of the earth. We have seen that the regime of debt directly resulted from this is debt that articulates the alliances with the filiations that have become extended, in order to form and to forge a means in the service of exchange? But Levi-Strauss seems to have closed the question again with a categorical reply: debt is suffering, by cleaving the length of his back: It must have a good cutting edge—says Clastres in an admirable text repression and education, the red-hot irons, and the atrocious procedures have only this meaning: to breed man, to mark him in conscience developed, that goes without saying—but it would not have developed if a tremendous quantity of freedom had not been there: In some way that is incomprehensible to me they have pushed right into the capital, although it is a long in the inscription of the State. The blocks subsist, but have become encasted and embedded bricks, having only a controlled mobility the problem of debts). The infinite creditor and infinite credit have replaced the blocks of mobile and finite debts. There is to touch the full body of the sovereign? Here we have a problem of castes. It is overcoding that impoverishes the debt infinite. It is a measure of Nietzsche's force to have stressed the importance of such a movement that begins with This infinitivator (infinitivation) cannot be understood exactly as Nietzsche would have it—that is, as a consequence of the interplay of to be territorial and becomes imperial. First of all, we have the impression that the elements of the in-depth system of impression that the elements of the in-depth system of representation have begun to move: the cellular migration has begun that will the repressing function (la fonction refoulante). (That is what we have already seen in psychosis, where the intrusion of the complex signs uniformly flow in a deterritorialized flow of writing. Men have even been seen drinking this flow. Andras Zempleni shows how water, and who never tire of crying: The signifier, you have not reached the signifier, you are still at the level the peacock's tail of a royal train, and that they have in this body their own intensive representatives. Royal incest is in the imperial formations, a tremendous quantity of freedom must have been expelled from the world, or at least from the the imperial formation, and as it will evolve later, indeed have something in common: the indifference to designation. It is in into a criterion). The complex relationship of designation, as we have seen it elaborated in the system of primitive connotation with secessions, and not that of revolution. Here again, death will have to be felt from within, but it will have to will have to be felt from within, but it will have to come from without. The founders of empires caused everything the evolution of the infinite debt. The Oedipal cell will have to complete its migration; it must no longer be content repressing representation; rather, from being the repressing representation, it will have to finally become the representative of desire itself. And it debt must not only become an infinite debt, it will have to be internalized and spiritualized as an infinite debt (Christianity Christianity and what follows). The father and the son will have to take form—that is, the royal triad must masculinize of the infinite debt that is now internalized. Oedipus-the-despot will have to be replaced by Oedipuses-as-subjects, Oedipuses-as-subjugated individuals, Oedipuses-as-fathers, and Oedipuses-as-sons Oedipuses-as-subjugated individuals, Oedipuses-as-fathers, and Oedipuses-as-sons. All the formal operations will have to be resumed within a decoded social field, and must of interior reproduction. The apparatus of social repression-psychoic repression will have to undergo a complete reorganization. Hence desire, having completed its a complete reorganization. Hence desire, having completed its migration, will have to experience this extreme affliction of being turned against itself

(And isn't this the strength of Lacan, to have saved psychoanalysis from the frenzied oedipalization to which it was the frenzied oedipalization to which it was linking its fate-to have brought about this salvation even at the price of a the system under consideration. And in more recent examples, we have to go along with Wittfogel when he shows the degree expression of relations within which the less developed concrete may have already realized itself before having posited the more manysided connection

The schizophrenic noncoded spaces to enter.) Decoded desires and desires for decoding have always existed; history is full of them. But we have have always existed; history is full of them. But we have just seen that only through their encounter in a place this occurs, the conjunction no longer merely designates remnants that have escaped coding, or consummations-consumptions as in the primitive feasts, or of producers and flows of money. The encounter might not have taken place, with the free workers and the money-capital existing one enters into the reign of the quantitas, which can have all sorts of particular values or be worth all sorts worth all sorts of quanta. This abstract quantity nonetheless must have some particular value, so that it still appears only as is why, before, the monetary and commercial inscription does not have a body of its own at its disposal, and why reproducing the factors that counteract it. But why does it have no end? Doubtless for the same reasons that provoke the ascertain that surplus value cannot be determined mathematically. Yet they have little cause to rejoice. They would be better off concluding between money and an imposed range of products (which I have a right to, which are my due, so they're mine recognizing that machines too work or produce value, that they have always worked, and that they work more and more in technical object). In this sense, it is not machines that have created capitalism, but capitalism that creates machines, and that is things ... For example, nondeterminist physics, with its corpuscular flows, will have to be brought into line with determinism.) The true axiomatic the flows are decoded, the specific flows of code that have taken a technical and scientific form are subjected to a severer too than all the old codes and overcodes that have disappeared: the axiomatic of the world capitalist market. In brief the axiomatizing role of the State. But the socialist States have more trouble stopping unexpected flow leakage except by direct violence to us to be the significance of McLuhan's analyses: to have shown what a language of decoded flows is, as opposed through the signifier's own withdrawal, the elements populating this field have for a criterion a minimal identity that they owe to signifier, pass through, and continue on beyond. Because these signs have crossed a new threshold of deterritorialization. Because these figures have have crossed a new threshold of deterritorialization. Because these figures have definitively lost the minimum conditions of identity that defined the into the production of our own sick, the schizophrenics. We have seen that the relationship of schizophrenia to capitalism went far its own reality—the decoded flows? The answer—as we have seen—is that capitalism is indeed the limit of all to be directly coded, and the appraising eye as we have analyzed it in the primitive system. It should be noted or those of Salisbury concerning the Siane of New Guinea, have shown how the introduction of money as an equivalent—which would not become capital and would not appropriate production. We have seen that this becoming-concrete appeared in the differential relation; but is a direct relation between decoded flows whose respective qualities have no existence prior to the differential relation itself. The quality capitalism, we maintain that it both does and does not have an exterior limit: it has an exterior limit that is exorcising this limit. And it also has, yet does not have, interior limits: it has interior limits under the specific conditions castes and statuses; classes are orders, castes, and statuses that have been decoded. To reread history through the class struggle is absorbs surplus value for ends that, taken as a whole, have nothing to do with his own enjoyment; more utterly enslaved immense accomplishment of Lenin and the Russian Revolution was to have forged a class consciousness consonant with the objective being after repudiation, how can we continue to be pious? We have repudiated and lost all our beliefs that proceeded by way again as shadows projected on a stage. The great territorialities have fallen into ruin, but the structure proceeds with all the them. To trace back from images to the structure would have little significance and would not rescue us from representation, if not rescue us from representation, if the structure did not have a reverse side that is like the real production of castration, which itself is not imaginary but symbolic. There we have the three major planes of structuration, which correspond to the action, so as to attract our children to Oedipus: we have evolved in Oedipus, we have been structured in Oedipus, and our children to Oedipus: we have evolved in Oedipus, we have been structured in Oedipus, and under the neutral and benevolent under the neutral and benevolent eye of the substitute, we have learned the song of castration, the lack-of-being-that-is-life; yes it is two activities, the two heads of desire. For as we have seen, it can be produced as the amorphous fluid of the recording surface of the body without organs. And we have doubtless been able to present things in a logical order at the level of this molecular chain of desire. We have seen that a code implied two things—one or the genic unconscious, always remaining subject, reproduces itself. And as we have seen, that is the primary inspiration of psychoanalysis: it does

We have seen on the contrary that what the libido invested, through Philippe Girard, in unpublished remarks that seem to us to have a wide application, situates the problem at several levels. In incest? (Thus the familial romance, or Oedipus's own wish to have been born of poor parents who would cleanse him of writes: A child pays no regard to social distinctions, which have little meaning for it as yet; and it classes people other functions. We have seen in this sense how social production produced the sick ideas. There is room for doubting that the decision would have been the same if Schreber had been schizophrenic rather than to spend time on the couch: schizoanalyze the psychoanalyst. We have maintained throughout that, by dint of their difference in nature invest the poor woman, the maid, or the whore to have revolutionary loves. No formation of the circuitous route of science and art, human beings have many times revolted against this fixity; this capacity notwithstanding, the in the middle of the fifteenth, since the same would have to be said of the Byzantine code underneath which strange code underneath which strange liberated flows were already circulating. We have seen this in the case of the painter Turner, and to speak much like Henry Miller of the need to have done with pouring out one's merciful and pitiful guts, these onto the enormous unproductive cleavage of castration, the flows that have become flows of corrugated iron, the openings blocked on all openings blocked on all sides. And perhaps this, as we have seen, is Where we find the commodity value of art has formed, whose mode of subjugation has no equal. We have seen on what foundations this aggregate operated: a whole field preconscious investments of class and of interest. And capitalists first have an interest in capitalism. A statement as commonplace as this as commonplace as this is made for another purpose: capitalists have an interest in capitalism only through the tapping of profits aims is questioned (It's clear that you're not workers, you have no idea whatsoever of real struggles, let's attack profits for a formation of sovereignty. Subject groups on the other hand have as their sole cause a rupture with causality, a revolutionary are like determinism and freedom in Kant's philosophy: they indeed have the same object—and social production is never anything other will the new irruption of desire come from? Those who have read us this far will perhaps find many reasons for which we haven't even thought of. If it did have one, it would be grotesque and disquieting at the same if we had ever seen a schizophrenic—no, no, we have never seen one. It's so and they have orgasms for having been so evil, for having tortured so well. It's so bad, but also so good an obstacle to treatment, and Freud reproaches himself for not having taken them sufficiently into account. The first of these factors that the prohibition existed in two forms, the one negative, having to do above all with the mother and imposing differentiation mise-en-scene of a machine to produce the real. Far from having lost who knows what contact with life, the schizophrenic is the tubular family, where the triangle multiplies endlessly, each member having his own triangle that interlocks with others without one's being leads them to think of the analytic activity as always having to evolve within a familial microcosm, and they continue to Oedipus-as-structure. For production, though they do so within the production process itself. Hence everything is production: production of productions, of actions and of current of the other or sees its own current interrupted. Hence the coupling that takes place within the partial object-flow connective surface, inscribing it in each and everyone of its disjunctions. Hence the strange relationship that Schreber has with God. To anyone all secondary realities are derived by a process of division). Hence the sole thing that is divine is the nature of precede the automatism (as in the paranoiac character, for instance). Hence Clerambault regarded automatism as merely a neurological mechanism in the

it is produced by desire, is thus a psychic reality. Hence it can be said that Kant's critical revolution changes nothing incurable insufficiency of being, an inability-to-be that is life itself. Hence the presentation of desire as something supported by needs, while there is an object that desire feels the lack of; hence the world does not contain each and every object that object missing, the one that desire feels the lack of; hence there exists some other place that contains the key to the object of desire is another machine connected to it. Hence the product is something removed or deducted from the process only this latter as a suitable subject for psychoanalytic investigation. Hence the sole task he assigns psychoanalysis is the explanation of forces of desire that serve as a basis for them. Hence in group fantasy the libido may invest all of an machines and Asiatic forms of society, industrial machines and capitalism. Hence when we posited the socius as the analogue of a flows of labor in the form of the free worker. Hence, unlike previous social machines, the capitalist machine is incapable of him a nonproductive stasis or an attitude of total withdrawal. Hence there is first of all, according to Bettelheim, an autonomous patent madness of Charlus or the supposed madness of Albertine. Hence Proust maintained that the Whole itself is a product, produced in a final depressive stage (the complete Object). Partial objects hence appear to her to be derived from (prelevés sur) global family as an institution and at its most archaic symbols. Hence, instead of participating in an undertaking that will bring about be organized in disjunctions whose use must be strictly exclusive. Hence there will be a girl-series and a boy-series, but dissymmetrical matter of the maximum conditions under which persons are differentiated. Hence the importance of the Kantian definition that posits God as no more of a way out than does the problem. Hence the schizo's withdrawal to the body without organs. It seems subjects—but also drunken or slumbering subjects—toward lethal destinations. Hence the goal of schizoanalysis: to analyze the specific nature of unconscious contains nothing ideal, nothing in the least conceptual, and hence nothing in the least personal, since personality, like the ego the psychiatric elaboration of the notions of dissociation and autism. Hence the reason, perhaps, for the rapid diffusion that the Freudian During the journey, or during the interruption of the journey? Hence another possible formulation of an inverse relationship: there would be without organs, and the decoded flows throw themselves into desiring-production. Hence it is correct to retrospectively understand all history in the institutional model at every stage of action, transmission, and motricity. Hence the social machine fashions a memory without which there would as money came to express the new state of abstraction. Hence the relative truth of psychoanalytic remarks concerning the anal nature the sky and the general appropriation of the productive forces. Hence the savage, primitive socius was indeed the only territorial machine of two paired members proposes him as the ideal husband. Hence, in his capacity as pseudo brother to his genetrix, he reduces the representative to what is blocked in this system. Hence Oedipus is indeed the limit, but the displaced limit that himself of what use can psychoanalytic interpretations be to me? Hence the duality is displaced, it is no longer between two could only be given (the lityuatieli), or carried away, kidnapped, hence in a certain sense stolen (the lipwotali); every union that accordingly over pieces and fragments (the wall and the tower). Hence the State is not primeval, it is an origin or no underlying flow escapes the overcoding of the despotic machine; hence it is by virtue of his sterility that he guarantees appellations, in the union of the signifier with its signifieds. Hence it is by no means a question of knowing if specific natures; the B-A Ba of the phallus as voice. Hence something else is always at issue in royal incest: bisexuality social repression-psychic repression will have to undergo a complete reorganization. Hence desire, having completed its migration, will have to experience this pores of the old full body of the social machine. Hence capitalism does not lead to the dissolution of feudalism, but a uniform interest rate, a unity of capital markets, etc. Hence one is correct in speaking of a profound dissimulation of production process, in order to become adjacent to this process. Hence there is a machinic surplus value produced by constant capital immanent limits on an ever widening and more comprehensive scale. Hence it is at the level of a generalized theory of any identity when they pass from one whole to another. Hence the figures, that is, the schizzes or breaks-flows are in in a free state on a desocialized body without organs. Hence one can say that schizophrenia is the exterior limit of are decoded and axiomatized by capitalism at the same time. Hence schizophrenia is not the identity of capitalism, but on the value here is determined as a surplus value of code. Hence the code relation is not only indirect, qualitative, and limited simple magnitude (the condition characterized by surplus value of flux). Hence capital differentiates itself from any other socius or full body displaced represented has become, as such, the representation of desire. Hence it goes without saying that this becoming or this constitution in which both the family and they are simultaneously immersed. Hence we are confronted by three unavoidable conclusions. (1) From the to this reaction. The way in which allosteric interactions work hence permits a complete freedom in the choice of controls. And idea not of edifice and superstructure, which is culture and hence false, but of continuous birth, renewal. life, life In the the machine, different and coexisting, different in their very coexistence. Hence it is absurd to speak of a death desire that introducing them into systems of representation that are themselves objective. Hence it can be said that the identity in nature between and flows, invested as such, to enter into the family; hence, that the familial investments are always a result of the of the disjunctions imposed by the law (for example, Oedipal homosexuality). But group fantasy no longer has anything but the drives not branch into two variable forces corresponding to heterosexuality and homosexuality, but creates in most people irreducible oppositions between the two the effect of castration as a psychoanalytic act. And Oedipal homosexuality—the qualitative aptitude for conflict—is rather the effect of of synthesis as legitimate or not. Take the example of homosexuality—though it is something more than an example. We noted and the radical innocence of flowers. The diagnosis of Oedipal homosexuality with a mother fixation, of a dominant depressive nature and oedipalizing interpretations of his own interpretations, contrasts two kinds of homosexuality, or rather two regions only one of which is Oedipal created by the prohibitions (incest by identification with the father, homosexuality by identification with the mother). The personal material of transgression at this level, such as new forms of incest and homosexuality, it is certain that the Oedipal triangle would have no that there is an Oedipal sexuality, an Oedipal heterosexuality and homosexuality, an Oedipal castration, as well as complete objects, global images for conflict of which Freud spoke, the qualitative opposition between homosexuality and heterosexuality, is in fact a consequence of Oedipus: far the nature of an anoedipal sexuality, an anoedipal heterosexuality and homosexuality, an anoedipal castration: the breaks-flows of desiring-production do not let a local and nonspecific heterosexuality and a local and nonspecific homosexuality arise. Everywhere, in this reversion, the innocence of flowers instead them, etc., one recognizes the perverse tie of a primary homosexuality between local groups, between brothers-in-law, co-husbands, childhood partners. Underlining the connection men from different filiations. The question why a female homosexuality hasn't given rise to Amazon groups capable of negotiating for extended filiations (filiation hysteria as opposed to alliance paranoia). Male homosexuality is therefore the representation of alliance that represses the ambiguous most serious error—when he wants to make of this homosexuality of alliance a product of the Oedipus complex as something the action of the local lines and their non-oedipal primary homosexuality. And if it is true that there exists an Oedipal it is true that there exists an Oedipal or filiative homosexuality, this should be understood merely as a secondary reaction to be understood merely as a secondary reaction to this group homosexuality, non-oedipal at first. As for Oedipus in general, it is one within the other under the effect of a primary homosexuality. Thus the antiexchangeist amorous machine encountered by Joyce in Exiles something else is always at issue in royal incest: bisexuality, homosexuality, castration, transvestism, as so many gradients and passages in the that such a hypothesis founds the omnipotence of a male homosexuality. Yet this is not at all the case; what is with a machine for tying shoes. The perverse lands of homosexuality, where the exclusive disjunctions of women with women, and men nonpersonal, the conjunctions nomadic and polyvocal, the disjunctions included, where homosexuality and heterosexuality cannot be distinguished any longer: the world of example, no gay liberation movement is possible as long as homosexuality is caught up in a relation of exclusive disjunction with Oedipus and to the pre-oedipal stages, by means of which homosexuality will be explained as a reinforced drive, and paranoia as	p 63 p 65 p 66 p 68 p 68 p 70 p 71 p 71 p 74 p 74 p 74 p 74 p 165 p 165 p 165 p 165 p 186 p 210 p 294 p 318 p 319 p 350 p 352

who was himself a child, in relation to another father. How does a delirium begin? Perhaps the cinema is able to type of anxiety, namely, the rarity of women that explains how it is that the adults no less than the children content (recreating history in delirium)? And what is this line, how can we situate schizophrenia and paranoia on either side of as it were, two faces. Elias Canetti has clearly shown how the paranoid organizes masses and packs. The paranoid opposes them psychic and social repression of its elementary productive forces. But how can we speak of machines in this microphysical or micropsychic enabled it to elaborate the huge network of cybernetic inter-connections. How, starting from this domain of chance or of real inorganization of a properly unconscious investment they translate. Thus no matter how well grounded the love blockage is, it curiously changes its as the idea that there is only one. Once again, have you ever seen a child at play: how he already populates the technical social machines with his own desire as an objective desire, alienated in myth or tragedy. How can this very complex ambivalence of psychoanalysis be explained? Several belief, Octave Mannoni likewise uses the theater model to show how the denial of belief in fact implies a transformation of the Imaginary—Oedipus as a universal metaphor. Why the theater? Just how far will one go in the development of a lack is indeed what is at issue, as Octave Mannoni shows: how can belief continue after repudiation, how can we continue to as Octave Mannoni shows: how can belief continue after repudiation, how can we continue to be pious? We have repudiated and leads linguistics to the point of its autocritique, by showing how the structural organization of signifiers still depends on a despotic the analyst. For these are Hegel-style destructions, ways of conserving. How is it that the celebrated neutrality, and what psychoanalysis calls links in the chain. How can we reconquer the process each time, constantly resuming the that they can only be evaluated each within the other. How would the schizo's voyage be possible independent of certain circuits would the schizo's voyage be possible independent of certain circuits, how could it exist without a land? But inversely, how can circuits, how could it exist without a land? But inversely, how can we be certain that these circuits don't reconstitute the which Jean Oury has been able to analyze in depth: how does one avoid the institution's re-forming an asylum structure, or neighborhood? Between do you put into these machines, what is the output, how does it work, what are your nonhuman sexes? The schizoanalyst machinic species. It is true that one might instead wonder how these conditions of dispersion, of real distinction, and of the absence of a link permit any machinic regime to exist—how the partial objects thus defined are able to form machines dispersion of the machine itself. And yet the problem persists: how can all that function together? For it is not yet of intensity). We have attempted to show in this respect how the relations of attraction and repulsion produced such states, sensations as the deterritorialized circuit of all the cycles of desire. How odd the psychoanalytic venture is. Psychoanalysis ought to be a ought, practically, to teach us to sing life. And see how the most defeated, sad .song of death emanates from it the sale agency capable of opposing the death desire. And how. does. it do this? By in principle turning death against guilt feeling. There is no need to tell all over how psychoanalysis culminates in a theory of culture that takes up love, a virtue that gives and produces, that engineers. (For how could what is in life still desire life? Who would clinic, in the psychoanalytic scene, with specialist artists who know how to handle the death instinct and bring off castration, bring What we have tried to show apropos of capitalism is how it inherited much from a transcendent death-carrying agency, the despotic from a transcendent death-carrying agency, the despotic signifier, but also how it brought about this agency's effusion in the full immanence capitalism works on the basis of decoded flows as such, how is it that it is infinitely further removed from desiring-production said that desiring-production is itself a decoded and deterritorialized production, how do we explain that capitalism, with its axiomatic, its statistics	p 320 p 320 p 322 p 324 p 324 p 329 p 330 p 331 p 331 p 332 p 332 p 333 p 333 p 334 p 335 p 335 p 335 p 335 with what is to be co-opted, and even anticipate it. (How many revolutionary groups as such are already in place for schizoanalysis is that of learning what a subject's desiring-machines are, how they work, with what syntheses, what bursts of energy in What we have tried to show from the outset is how the unconscious productions and formations were not merely repelled by the oscillations from one formula to the other are possible. How can this be? How can the schizophrenic escape, with its formula to the other are possible. How can this be? How can the schizophrenic escape, with its molecular dispersion, form an between the one who escapes, and the one who knows how to make what he is escaping escape, collapsing a filthy of a molar order. Freud demonstrated clearly in this respect how one went from psychotic multiplicities of dispersion, founded on the a preconscious investment of a reactionary type? And more rarely, how do certain people whose interest is objectively reactionary come to materialist psychiatry he dreamed of, that prevented him from seeing how desire was part of the infrastructure, and that confined him coincide with the preconscious investments of interest, and that explains how the latter can be perturbed and perverted in the most break or code enough—and in that very way! Oh how beautiful the machine is! The officer of In the Penal through which desire desires its own repression. We have seen how the capitalist machine constituted a system of immanence bordered by old full body as a residual and subordinated territoriality (witness how the capitalist machine revives the despotic Urstaat, or how the witness how the capitalist machine revives the despotic Urstaat, or how the socialist machine preserves a State and market monopoly capitalism	p 338 p 338 p 338 p 340 p 340 p 341 p 342 p 344 p 345 p 345 p 346 p 346 p 347 p 347

do the job? Aren't there more important questions than these, however? Given a certain effect, what machine is capable of producing the schizo as Homo natura. This will be the case, however, only on one condition, which in fact constitutes the third to go about its business. The surface of the table, however, is eaten up by the supporting framework. The nontermination of thus allow us to return to nothingness? It would seem, however, that the flows of energy are still too closely connected is not recorded in the same way it is produced, however. Or rather, it is not reproduced within the apparent objective introduced as a third term in the series, without destroying, however, the essential binary-linear nature of this series: 2, 1, 2 discerned on the recording surface. It is a strange subject, however, with no fixed identity, wandering about over the body without Law. The celibate machine itself is not a paranoiac machine, however. Everything about it is different: its cogs, its sliding carriage conjoning of the requirements of spiritualism and positivism. The ego, however, is like daddy-mommy: the schizo has long since ceased to a relationship of comprehension? A mode of expression? The question, however, has been posed too theoretically. The fact is, from the Despot, the body of Money. It is never a projection, however, of the body without organs. On the contrary: the body characteristic of these chains still do not involve any exclusion, however, since exclusions can arise only as a function of inhibitors without some sort of mediation. This is not the case, however. Let us consider a child at play, or a child and its order of symbolic positions and functions. For us, however, the problem is one of knowing if, indeed, that is series, each one excluding the other. This is not all, however, since the vegetal theme—the innocence of flowers—brings us exclusive disjunction is defined in terms of a principle which, however, constitutes its two terms or underlying wholes, and where the be achieved, is already being achieved, outside it. We cannot, however, share either this pessimism or this optimism. For there is When it became necessary once again to confront psychosis directly, however, the family was immediately reopened in extension, and was in an expressive milieu that provides its own justifications, and that—however capable of expressing the action of the alienating

We do have, however, the elements of a response. Social production would need at time before making their way into France. Not this one, however; that same year Capgras and Carrette presented a case of encounter between private property and commodity production, which presents itself, however, as two quite distinct forms of decoding, by privatization and

However, at all events, it does express the law that a the impossible itself. You see, that is what you wanted! However it is this conclusion, going directly from the repression to alliance that represses the ambiguous signs of intense bisexual filiation. However, Devereux seems to us to be wrong on two occasions if Oedipus were already installed within the savage territorial machine. However, as Nietzsche says with regard to bad conscience, such a contrary, it is evident that the individual in the family, however young, directly invests a social, historical, economic, and political field for the dispossessed primitives: a shantytown Oedipus. We have seen, however, that the colonized remained a typical example of resistance to Secondly, however, the relative limit is no more nor less than the a Hindu or an Eskimo can dream of Oedipus, without however being subjected to the complex, without having the complex. For he thought the system were in a state of equilibrium. However, the problem is altogether different: it is a question of this aspect fades before the relations of exchange, which are, however, merely the form this distribution takes within the sphere of exercised through and in the transcendence of the signifier. There, however, as elsewhere, an irreducible exteriority of conquest asserts itself.

For the despotic signifier, without exegesis or interpretation, while the law, however, wants to explain what it signifies, to assert an independence of flows. The action of decoded flows is not enough, however, to cause the new break to traverse and transform the shadow of this unapplied principle of convertibility—which is enough, however, to ensure that the Desire of the most disadvantaged creature component of the world-wide capitalist machine. It must be added, however, that the center itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment

On the one hand, codes continue to exist—even as one go an undivided quantity flowing over the full body, however diverse the uses for which it is allocated (interest, dividends aim of the theory is clear—a theory that refrains, however, from employing any moral reference. Between the two, however, the relationship is rather that of an included disjunction. This of the market place. The consideration of all these machines, however, whether they be real, symbolic, or imaginary, must indeed intervene body without organs itself, thereby channeling or codifying the flows. However, the whole question is in knowing whether one can speak perhaps you will cease pouring it out like a sewer, however melodious it may sound to your ears, and rise up of desire enter and exit through the codes that continue, however, to inform the model and experience of death that are transference of psychoanalysis. 5 The Second Positive Task We cannot however allow the difference in regime to make us forget the escape? The word is poorly chosen to please. Courage consists, however, in agreeing to flee rather than live tranquilly and hypocritically a party apparatus. This situation is not at all adequate, however, for resolving the following problem: why do many of those is not an illness, not a breakthrough but a breakthrough, however distressing and adventurous: breaking through the wall or the limit or end whose combinations obtain such and such a result. ... The incest motive is a logical deduction of the human reason, which has recourse to this last extremity, to save first and foremost is a logical deduction made by the human reason, even if unconsciously made, and secondly is introduced into analyses are, or should be, so impersonal that the so-called human relations are not involved. The first relationship is neither personal ordinary bed and board of psychoanalysis and psychiatry. If the human race survives, future men will, I suspect, look back on solid elements, each having its specialized function and operating under human control in order to transmit a movement and perform a to transmit a movement and perform a task, then the human machine was indeed a true machine. The social machine is to itself the cultivable species, the agricultural implements, and the human organs. Meyer Fortes makes a passing remark that is joyous himself during the greater part of the existence of the human race, his entire prehistoric labor; a system of evaluations possessing by someone who doesn't quite understand how one can maintain human surplus value as the basis for capitalist production, while recognizing the falling tendency—the increasing intensity of the exploitation of human labor, the diminution of the price of the elements of investment in equipment in another area. Thus the importance of human surplus value remains decisive, even at the center and in itself, whose value is no more measurable than that of human surplus value. It is not even the profitability of the but on capital—a surplus value that is added to human surplus value and that comes to correct the relative diminution worker. And just as we found, on the side of human surplus value insofar as it resulted from decoded flows, an the more manifest in that it guarantees the extraction of human surplus value on the periphery and in the appropriated zones

And in accordance with the complementarity of simulation and identity that we encountered earlier, if the identification is that of together in a whole, but that do not maintain any identity when they pass from one whole to another. Hence the elements populating this field have for a criterion a minimal identity that they owe to their relations of opposition, and that Because these figures have definitively lost the minimum conditions of identity that defined the elements of the signifier itself. Because in in the point-sign, or in the figure-break stripped of its identity, having now only a floating identity, tends to replace the figure-break stripped of its identity, having now only a floating identity, tends to replace the model of the game. In short inserting itself between them, and working under the conditions of identity of their elements. The pure floating configurations starting from lines and points without a discernible identity. The route taken by the decoded flows is traced by capitalism at the same time. Hence schizophrenia is not the identity of capitalism, but on the contrary its difference, its divergence to decode, to half understand. Moreover, despite the abundance of identity cards, files, and other means of control, capitalism does not identical natures and differing regimes? Could it be that the identity in nature is at its highest point in the order point in the order of modern capitalist representation, because this identity is universally realized in the immanence of this order and or that he works according to his desire. Hence it can be said that the identity in nature between the two productions is completely hidden there an internalized and displaced limit; precisely for these reasons, the identity in nature must appear for itself between social production and between social production and desiring-production. There is circulation only if inscription requires or permits it. The method of the primitive the territorial signs that plant their flags in bodies. And if one wants to call this inscription in naked flesh writing Territorial Machine The notion of territoriality merely appears ambiguous. For if it is taken to mean a principle of residence or the body of the earth, before there is a State. If declension characterizes the primitive machine, it is because it is on the socius. Marxists are right to remind us that if kinship is dominant in primitive society, it is determined as is determined as dominant by economic and political factors. And if filiation expresses what is dominant while being itself determined, alliance finds itself contradicted by practice. It is necessary to ask if there exists in the asymmetrical systems of alliance a fundamental anything of that nature among the Mru ... Everyone behaves as if he were ignorant of the compensation that would result from space, where the full body of the socius is as if adjacent to production; it has not yet brought production under elements vary—women, consumer goods, ritual objects, rights, prestige, status. If one postulates that somewhere there has to be a kind that they wished to credit with the invention of history. If what is called history is a dynamic and open social of incest, is about: the fear of a decoded flow? If capitalism is the universal truth, it is so in the series of explosions before extending into images, figures, and drawings. If the full body falls back on the productive connections and not content to inscribe all things, it must act as if it produced them. It is necessary that the connections reappear reappear in a form compatible with the inscribed disjunctions, even if they react in turn on the form of these disjunctions an active repression of the intense memory of filiation. For if genealogy and filiations are the object of an ever vigilant sister (or a father, a daughter) to the outside world if a woman was gained in the previous generation ... The pivot-couple the twinning, which relates him to his feminine part. And if the Yourougou son carries away a part of the placenta the parents are not genetically the parents of their children; if we are to believe their doctrine, parents and children are order causes the whole intensive scale to collapse again. Actually, if the son cannot marry his mother, it is not because myth narrates and explains. In other words, one reasons as if the myth placed on the stage persons defined as father the lines of passage and the lines of blockage, as if what was blocked or prohibited reappeared in marriages in spectral conditions all representation: it is the representative of desire. But if it is termed representative, this is because it is equivalent of the local lines and their non-oedipal primary homosexuality. And if it is true that there exists an Oedipal or filiative Psychoanalysis and Ethnology We are moving too fast, acting as if Oedipus were already installed within the savage territorial machine.

However borrowed from the latter: for example, a familial complex, even if it differs from our own, or cultural material (des contenus from our own, or cultural material (des contenus culturels), even if it is brought into relation with an ethnic unconscious—as might into the symbolic void of the father. Or rather, if it is true that the analysis doesn't even begin as apart from colonization) the necessary conditions to begin to exist. If it is true that thought can be evaluated in terms seriousness that the Oedipus complex was not to be found if it wasn't looked for. And that one wasn't looking if if it wasn't looked for. And that one wasn't looking if one hadn't had oneself analyzed. And that is why your of psychic repression is quite complicated. Things would be simpler if the libido or the affect were repressed, in the most maintenance of a familialist perspective, which wreaks havoc everywhere. For if the institution is first understood as a familial institution, it capitalist society at least, Oedipus is a sure thing (even if they underline, as does Fromm, the elements of a new is always brought to a halt well before 3+1, and if there is a primitive Oedipus, it is a neg-Oedipus, in social historical field that are effected by the father. And if it passes over to the son, this is not by at the level of an analysis of deliriums. But already, if it appears that Oedipus is an effect, this is because submit to a long voyage before burying or immersing it. If present-day ethnologists are again evincing a lively interest in the machine. Once again, it is not a question of knowing if the essence of a ritual is sexual, or if it knowing if the essence of a ritual is sexual, or if it is necessary to take into account political, economic, and issue here—and the whole problem of the unconscious. For if exchange underlies everything, why is it that what takes place between two lineages or lineage segments is, in this society, if not prohibited, at least widely disapproved of. Will it be at least widely disapproved of. Will it be said that, if desire knows nothing of exchange, it is because exchange is And above all, what is made of the unconscious itself, if not its explicit reduction to an empty form, from which to define a preconscious, but certainly not the unconscious. For if it is true that the unconscious has no material or problem is altogether different: it is a question of knowing if the disequilibrium is pathological and a manifestation of consequences, as the stamp of the sign. And what is his pain if not a pleasure for the eye that regards it, the eliminating every consideration of exchange or interest a l'anglaise. And if they are eliminated from psychology, it is not in order It is the bad debtor who must be understood as if the marks had not sufficiently taken on him, as if if the marks had not sufficiently taken on him, as if he were or had been unmarked. He has merely widened that goes without saying—but it would not have developed if a tremendous quantity of freedom had not been expelled from outside long ago? It is not always easy to know if one is considering a primitive community that is repressing an produced by the economic givens of the agrarian problem. (As if the Greeks had discovered in their own way what the one; or rather we would think about the present one if we knew who he was or knew anything definite about mark, a new severity. It would be easy, too easy, if it were enough to make incest possible, and to implement respect to desiring-production. But this migration would never be possible if there did not occur correlatively a considerable change in the every language presupposes a writing system from which it originates, if by that he means the existence and the connection of an order of meaning, still less within a signifier. And if incest seemed impossible to us from this point of view visual to converge toward the eminent unity of the despot. If we call the order of representation in a social system a hierarchy of names, verses, numbers, and corresponding beings—and if necessary, the verse will be placed in a bottle filled as elsewhere, an irreducible exteriority of conquest asserts itself. For if language itself does not presuppose conquest, the leveling operations (les the other language is completely coded into phonetic elements. At the heart of Capital, Marx points to the encounter analytical unit is a pure fiction, a cosmic swindle, as if one were to measure intergalactic or intra-atomic distances in meters has no conclusion. A quotient of differentials is indeed calculable if it is a matter of the limit of variation of viewpoint of a full output, but it is not calculable if it is a matter of the production flow and the being the means immanent to the capitalist mode of production. If capitalism is the exterior limit of all societies, this is is apt to take in economy as well as linguistics: If the movement does not tend toward any limit, if the linguistics: If the movement does not tend toward any limit, if the quotient of differentials is not calculable, the present no succeeded and has preserved its immense zones of underdevelopment.) And if it is true that the tendency to a falling rate the same situation, determined by capitalist decoding or deterritorialization. Universal history is nothing more than a theology if it does not seize control of the conditions of its father and the mother, or the child? Psychoanalysis acts as if it were the child (the father is sick only from son. The first error of psychoanalysis is in acting as if things began with the child. This leads psychoanalysis to develop child (the Freudian abandonment of the theme of seduction). Oedipus is a resistance; if we have been able to speak of the intrinsically perverted keep from forming for themselves yet another such territory, even if on the body without organs as the indifferent support for of territorialities is opposed to the movement of deterritorialization. And if perversion in the narrowest sense of the word performs a Chaplin feed him his lunch, since it is lunch time. If laughter is a reaction that takes certain circuits, it can nomadic circuit? How does one prevent the unit chosen, even if a specific institution, from constituting a perverted society of tolerance fails to understand the nature and function of partial objects if one does not see therein such elements, rather than parts to the rule so clearly stated by Serge Leclair, even if he sees this only as a fiction instead of the undefined, a cover for a bicycle bell, half a crutch (if one indefinitely runs up against the same set of pure thing—in the indirect nature of the interactions under consideration. If it is true that every partial object emits a flow that enables us to understand this kind of situation: for if the corresponding chain effectively forms codes, inasmuch as it folds desire? A being-far-death? Or rather an investment of death, even if speculative? None of the above. The experience of death is all the way into the desert and decoding them—even if this idea necessarily took on the appearance of a crazy of its energetic conversions, and not as an abstract principle. If Freud needs death as a principle, this is by virtue genes of drives—eight molecular genes, for example—functioning machinically? If one looks in this direction for the ultimate reason why the reason will be found in Freud's practice itself. For if the principle has nothing to do with the facts, it the analyst provides and try to think up something different ... if you realize that he is not a god but a with all its might. The answer is the death instinct, if we call instinct in general the conditions of life that at its maximum, the regimes differ to the highest degree. If we examine the primitive or the barbarian constellations, we see the precritical age. Doubtless these illusions would not take hold if they did not benefit from a coincidence and a support and the machinic indices all the way to the desiring-machines. If the essential aspect of the destructive task is to undo are fundamentally two poles; but we would not be satisfied if we had to present them merely as the duality of into an effectively revolutionary force. For what is the schizo, if not first of all the one who can no longer body without organs or the naked matter of molecular desiring-production. If we wonder where these forms of force come from, it the real problems, which are always of an organizational nature. If Reich, at the very moment he raised the most profound persons or individuals in this instance than in the other). If the preconscious revolutionary break appears at the first level, and succeeded in rescuing sexuality from the category of secrets, even if public, even if disinfected: i.e., as long as it sexuality from the category of secrets, even if public, even if disinfected: i.e., as long as it has not been psychoanalysis do, and first of all what does Freud do, if not maintain sexuality under the morbid yoke of the little such except on condition that it be desexualized and sublimated. If he holds so closely to this hypothesis, it is because and it classes people of inferior rank with its parents if they love it as its parents do. We always fall sides and are not familial. From the start we wonder if the libido knows father-mother, or rather if it makes the start we wonder if the libido knows father-mother, or rather if it makes the parents function as something entirely different, as It smells stuffy in here—some relation with the outside, if you please. For desire does not survive cut off from off from its economic and social investments and counterinvestments. And if there is, to use Freud's terms, a purely erotic motive the other. There is only the social and the metaphysical. If something crops up afterward, it is certainly not the social contains a constant of all modern attempts at reform. And if this tendency appears in its most naive form in community but merely characterized Oedipus in the whole of its extension. If there is a veritable impasse, a veritable contradiction, it is as the world of meanings? Long live the Ndembu, for if we follow the detailed account by the ethnologist Turner, the social into mental alienation; what is more, one acts as if the libido did not directly invest the social contradictions as and he keeps his word. Now the question is, first, if that is what makes him ill, or if on the is, first, if that is what makes him ill, or if on the contrary that is the schizophrenic process, which is voyage. With the result that schizoanalysis would come to nothing if it did not add to its positive tasks the constant for doubting that the decision would have been the same if Schreber had been schizophrenic rather than paranoiac, if he had the same if Schreber had been schizophrenic rather than paranoiac, if he had taken himself for a black or a Jew a black or a Jew rather than a pure Aryan, if he had not proved himself so competent in the management himself so competent in the management of his wealth, and if in his delirium he had not displayed a taste for the bringing to light of the unconscious reactionary investment as if devoid of an aim, would be enough to transform it institutions and a total upheaval of the means of production.... If some conspiracy, according to Nietzsche's wish, were to use science and art themselves, work so closely with the established sovereignties—if only because of the structures of financing? Because art, as its beginnings, but was hidden underneath aims and objects, even if aesthetic, and underneath recordings or axiomatics: the pure process that truly unconscious libido, a disinterested love: this machine is fantastic. If one keeps in mind the tautological statement made above, one or rather a village clamoring for a new prefect? And if one were to ask when it all started to go to the molecular multiplicities of the productions of desire. And if it is true that delirium is coextensive with the social the maintenance of paranoiac unconscious investments in revolutionary groups). And if we put forward desire as a revolutionary agency, it is schizoanalysis as such has strictly no political program to propose. If it did have one, it would be grotesque and disquieting in the name of an absolute incompetence. Someone asked us if we had ever seen a schizophrenic—no, no, we have seen a schizophrenic—no, no, we have never seen one. If someone reading this book feels that things are fine in it is the same production, but under two different regimes; if, on this socius as a full body, there is thus is the same production working under the difference in regime; if there is, and how there comes to be, a formation how there comes to be, a formation of subject-groups; etc. If someone retorts that we are claiming the famous rights to The man in the garage has been his best therapist. The fact that this image in turn finally suffers a repression, that it comes to a libidinal investment of desire that only secondarily derives an image of the father from desiring-production. The same holds true for being hungry, and this investment refers only secondarily to an image of the mother. What is left in the end is an intimate familial subject of representation, as well as the objects represented as images, and the formal relations between them all. Symbolic thus no our boredom, our life where nothing happens; nothing left but images that revolve within the infinite subjective representation. We will muster muster all our strength so as to believe in these images, from the depths of a structure that governs our relationships parents lay their fingers on them. To trace back from images to the structure would have little significance and would not nothing but an image, a myth; that this or these images are produced by an oedipalizing structure; that this structure acts self-criticism? It is the point where the structure, beyond the images that fill it and the Symbolic that conditions it within schizoanalysis is unaware of persons, aggregates, and laws, and of images, structures, and symbols. It is an orphan, just as it the simulacra to a point where they cease being artificial images to become indices of the new world. That is what in liberated desires, but ones that, like cadavers, feed on images. Death is not desired, but what is desired is dead not desired, but what is desired is dead, already dead: images. Everything labors in death, everything wishes for death. Because it describes a pure field of algebraic immanence that no longer allows any surveillance on the part of axiom to the previous ones. Capitalism defines a field of immanence and never ceases to fully occupy this field. But the bourgeois field of immanence—as delimited by the conjunction of the decoded flows, the on the full body of capital-money: it has realized the immanence, it has rendered concrete the abstract as such and has But the imperturbable modern axiomatic, from the depths of its immanence, reproduces the transcendence of the Urstaat as its internalized limit	p 251 p 254 p 254 p 261 p 261 capitalist representation, because this identity is universally realized in the immanence of this order and in the fluxion of the decoded is stronger than any other, because, by means of the immanence and the decoding, antiproduction has spread throughout all of production of labor. In this way capitalism fills its field of immanence with images: even destitution, despair, revolt—and on the other Oedipal images that will be deployed in the field of immanence left uncovered by the withdrawal of the signifier. I reach on high, which gives way to a social field of immanence where the decoded flows produce images and level them down form that produces the images filling the capitalist field of immanence, the capitalist, the worker, etc. In other terms, capitalism indeed how it brought about this agency's effusion in the full immanence of its own system: the full body, having become that have seen how the capitalist machine constituted a system of immanence bordered by a great mutant flow, nonpossessive and nonpossessed, flowing	p 262 p 262 p 264 p 268 p 268 p 303 p 335 p 346

a cycle whose relationship to desire is that of an immanent principle. That is why desiring-production is the principal concern of he termed the critical revolution. Kant intended to discover criteria immanent to understanding so as to distinguish the legitimate and the to us an unknown force of the disjunctive synthesis, an immanent use that would no longer be exclusive or restrictive, but synthesis: it too is capable of two uses, the one immanent, the other transcendent. And here again, why does psychoanalysis reinforce a firm principle only if we have at our disposal immanent criteria capable of determining the legitimate uses, as opposed to Analysis termed transcendental is precisely the determination of these criteria, immanent to the field of the unconscious, insofar as they are for the cure. Thus we have already seen how the immanent criteria of desiring-production permitted a definition of legitimate uses of contrasting reversion: restoring the syntheses of the unconscious to their immanent use. The immanent unity of the earth as the immobile motor gives way the father and genitor, is himself a high intensive part, immanent to the placenta, inseparable from the twinning, which relates him of desire, whose use and functioning schizoanalysis discovers in their immanent relationship with social machines. The unconscious does not speak, it	p 146 p 158 p 180 law had nothing to do with a natural, harmonious, and immanent totality, but that it acted as an eminent formal unity imposes—superimposes—a plane of subordination on their plane of immanent connotation? The signifier is the sign that has become a signifier. In vain will the signifier be immersed in the immanent system of language (la langue), or be used to clear or seek to become later: a guarantee against despotism, an immanent principle that unites the parts into a whole, that makes not able to conceive a law of organization that is immanent in the universe: they need to posit and internalize this as an abstraction (the overcoding eminent unity). It assumes its immanent concrete existence only in the subsequent forms that cause it can a whole to which it will render its law immanent. It is no longer the pure signifier that regulates its primordial Urstaat on the new state of things, rendering it immanent to the new system insofar as possible, making it interior of the differential relation as a conjunction that defines the immanent social field particular to capitalism, and confers on the abstraction well only providing they break down, crises being the means immanent to the capitalist mode of production. If capitalism is the ever widening circle of capitalism is completed, while reproducing its immanent limits on an ever larger scale, only if the surplus but by the incommensurability between two flows that are nonetheless immanent to each other, by the disparity between the two aspects having no assignable exterior limit, and where capitalism reproduces its immanent limits on an ever widening and more comprehensive scale.	p 198 p 206 p 206 p 212 p 219 p 220 p 221 p 221 p 227 p 230 p 234 p 237 p 239
Hence by the following: that he tends to fashion a purely immanent theory of language that shatters the double game of the or displace this limit, by substituting for it its own immanent relative limits, which it continually reproduces on a widened scale schizophrenic realities, but they exist and function only within the immanent axiomatic that exorcises and repels this reality. The language of this absolute limit or are content to displace a relative immanent limit that will reconstitute itself further along; on whether controlling of surplus value—these constitute the three aspects of capitalism's immanent axiomatic. And monetarization everywhere comes to fill the abyss of	p 242 p 246 p 246 p 247 p 250
Urstaat: from being at first the transcendent unity, it becomes immanent to the field of social forces, enters into their service had the effect of making the State more and more immanent and subordinate to the actual field of forces; but precisely is continually confronting limits and barriers that are interior and immanent to itself, and that, precisely because they are immanent, let and immanent to itself, and that, precisely because they are immanent, let themselves be overcome only provided they are reproduced on and appropriating their surplus labor. The third is the modern immanent machine, which consists in decoding the flows on the full what it decodes to pass beyond the wall of its immanent regulations and beyond its transcendental resurrections. Each type of social is continually repelling and exorcising, while capitalism itself produces its immanent limits, which it never ceases to displace and enlarge. But signifier taken in a maximum that distributes lack, and an immanent system of relations between minimal elements that come to fill for a field of forces that is more and more immanent, more and more internalized: this describes the evolution of the be doubly exorcised, doubly displaced, once by the position of immanent limits that capitalism does not cease to reproduce on an from matter as intensity=0. The body without organs is the immanent substance, in the most Spinozist sense of the word; and everywhere it mixes antiproduction with the productive forces in the immanent reproduction of its own always widened limits (the axiomatic).	p 252 p 252 p 259 p 259 p 261 p 262 p 266 p 268 p 268 p 304 p 327 p 335

With incest's new position in the imperial formation, we are therefore speaking only of a migration in the most ancient authors saw this clearly); it is the imperial formation that makes graphism into a system of writing in Legislation, bureaucracy, accounting, the collection of taxes, the State monopoly, imperial justice, the functionaries' activity, historiography: everything is written in the	p 199 p 200 p 201 p 201 p 202 p 202 p 202
the differences between these two forms of representation, territorial and imperial. In the first place, territorial representation is made up of overwhelmed in a new destiny, with the despotic machine and imperial representation. In the first place, graphism aligns itself on the body. No water will ever cleanse the signifier of its imperial origin: the signifying master or the master signifier. In vain sperm and excrement. One might think that the system of imperial representation was, in spite of everything, milder than that of judgment and an application directed at the rebellious parts. The imperial barbarian law possesses instead two features that are in opposition late Roman emperors, and the juridical form will accompany the imperial formation, the legislator alongside the monster, Gaius and Commodus, Papinian	p 203 p 205 p 206 p 211 p 212 p 213

Oedipus begins its cellular, ovular migration in the system of imperial representation: from being at first the displaced represented of desire comes back to us from all quarters the discovery of imperial machines that preceded the traditional historical forms, machines characterized by	p 215 p 217 passing back and forth between alliance and filiation. But the imperial myth of the origin expresses something else: the divergence of by filiation. Jean-Pierre Vernant shows in this way that the imperial myths are not able to conceive a law of organization	p 219 p 219
the despotic State is the abstraction that is realized—in imperial formations, to be sure—only as an abstraction (the overcoding the despot—all this is evidence that writing belongs to imperial despotic representation. full body of the earth. The second is the transcendent imperial machine, which consists in overcoding the flows on the full symbolically occupied but not lived or inhabited, inasmuch as the imperial incest effects an overcoding that in turn surveys the entire the full body of the despot and to the corresponding imperial code. Consequently, the understanding of symbolic representations may consist in	p 261 p 266 p 301 inasmuch as capitalism reproduces and revives the archaism of the imperial symbol or the vanished despot. All three are necessary—precisely	p 310

Even when it speaks Swiss or American, linguistics manipulates the access to a modern and functional understanding of language. The imperialism of the signifier does not take us beyond the question opposition to despotism. But from the beginning it expresses the imperialism of the signifier that produces its signifieds as effects that it is this whole constellation of the new alliance—the imperialism of the signifier, the metaphorical or metonymic necessity of the spheres of consumption and investment: advertising, civil government, militarism, and imperialism. shallow stream—always crossed already or not yet crossed. For incest is like this motion, it is impossible. And it is Symbolic is. But what does it mean to say that incest is impossible? Isn't it possible to go to bed with it is prohibited? The problem lies elsewhere. The possibility of incest would require both persons and names—son, sister, mother, brother the same time—yet this would be the condition for incest. Granted, incest is a lure, it is impossible. But the time—yet this would be the condition for incest. Granted, incest is a lure, it is impossible. But the problem is the germen. It is always possible to use the term incest, as well as indifference to incest, for this regime composed to use the term incest, as well as indifference to incest, for this regime composed of one and the same being disjunctions. But that is precisely the problem; one cannot confound incest as it would be in this intensive nonpersonal regime that in this intensive nonpersonal regime that would institute it, with incest as represented in extension in the state that prohibits it the Oedipal relation the mother is also the earth, and incest is an infinite renaissance. (He is wrong only in thinking transcended sexuality.) The somatic complex refers to a germinal implex. Incest refers to a this-side-of that cannot be represented as such since the complex is an element derived from this this-side-of. Incest as it is prohibited (the form of discernible persons) is prohibited (the form of discernible persons) is employed to repress incest as it is desired (the substance of the intense earth the connective syntheses. Such is indeed the meaning of the incest prohibition conceived as the establishment of a physical system in substitute for the aunt, as the first possible or permitted incest; what does the blocking or causes passage is the maternal only by subjecting them to the homosexual rules of alliance. Incest is only the retroactive effect of the repressing representation on be caught (That's what you wanted! The decoded flows were incest!). Then a long story begins, the story of oedipalization. But that would be the object of repression? Is it because incest is prohibited? We always fall back on this pale rationale is prohibited? We always fall back on this pale rationale: incest is desired because it is prohibited. The prohibition of incest incest is desired because it is prohibited. The prohibition of incest would therefore imply an Oedipal representation, and it would be not only does the Oedipal representation presuppose the prohibition of incest, but it is not even possible to say that the more Oedipal as the prohibitions are aimed, not simply at incest, but at all other types of sexual relations, blocking the blocking the other paths. In a word, the repression of incest is not born of a repressed Oedipal representation any more insofar as sexual repression is directed at something other than incest—such is the long history of our society. But the the mother. We have already seen how the prohibition of incest referred, not to Oedipus, but to the noncoded flows that the Fourbe myth; or the intense germinal influx, the this-side-of incest, as in the Yourougou myth, which introduces disorder into the and of their infinite circuit. 7 Barbarian or Imperial Representation Incest with the sister and incest with the mother are very 7 Barbarian or Imperial Representation Incest with the sister and incest with the mother are very different things. The sister is of alliance, the other to the disjunctive category of filiation. Incest with the sister is prohibited insofar as the conditions of coding require that alliance not be confounded with filiation; and incest with the mother, insofar as descent within filiation must not to interfere with ascending lines. That is why the despot's incest is twofold, by virtue of the new alliance and direct showed in his strange book: the same rule that proscribes incest must prescribe it for certain persons. Exogamy must result in the endogamous marriages in the tribe. It is clear that incest with the mother has a completely different meaning: this time union with the princess-sister and the union with the mother-queen. Incest goes by twos. The hero is always sitting astride two to find his mother again. The purpose of this double incest is not to produce a flow, not even a magic how such a thing is possible. How is it that incest has become possible, and not only possible, but the manifest one locus of representation to another. In the imperial formation, incest has ceased being the displaced represented of desire to become be no doubt: this way the despot has of committing incest, and of making it possible, in no way involves removing machine; yet it is still as the displaced represented that incest now comes to occupy the position of the repressing representation be easy, too easy, if it were enough to make incest possible, and to implement this in sovereign fashion, so that social repression would be made to end. The royal barbarian incest is merely the means to overcode the flows of desire O Caligula. O Heliogabalus.. O mad memory of vanished emperors! Incest never having been the desire... but merely its displaced represented from psychic repression, social repression has everything to gain when incest comes to take the place of the representation itself, and mute signifier. He is again correct in linking writing to incest in a mysterious fashion. But we see nothing in this order of meaning, still less within a signifier. And if incest seemed impossible to us from this point of view, it to us from this point of view, it is because incest is nothing other than a jump that necessarily fails, this the eye no longer has anything to see or evaluate: incest, the simple displaced limit, neither repressed nor repressing, but merely to the voice of the new alliance and direct filiation. Incest is the very operation of overcoding at the two ends and all the extended filiations are subsumed by direct filiation. Incest or the royal trinity is therefore the whole of the signifieds, effects the overcoding of the whole chain. What made incest impossible—namely, that at times we had the appellations (mother broke through the prohibitions they bore—has ceased to exist. Incest has become possible in the wedding of the kinship bodies his true mother is the mother of the tribe. Once incest is possible, it matters little whether it is simulated or since in any case something else again is simulated through incest. And in accordance with the complementarity of simulation and identity and production of the real by a quasi cause. In incest it is the signifier that makes love with its signifieds subordination. And what is simulated and therefore produced, through the incest that is itself simulated and therefore produced—all the more voice. Hence something else is always at issue in royal incest: bisexuality, homosexuality, castration, transvestism, as so many gradients and passages body of the despot himself. This is the reason that incest changes its meaning or locus, and becomes the repressing representation p 210

For what is at stake in the overcoding effected by incest is the following; that all the organs of all the p 210 they have in this body their own intensive representatives. Royal incest is inseparable from the intense multiplication of organs and their p 210 full body. (Sade saw clearly this always royal role of incest.) The apparatus of social repression-psycho repression—i.e., the repressing p 210

Oedipus has received its name, the clubfooted despot committing double incest through overcoding, with his sister and his mother as body p 215 with an additional turn of the screw, represses the desiring-machines. Incest derives from this investment and not the reverse. At first occupied but not lived or inhabited, inasmuch as the imperial incest effects an overcoding that in turn surveys the entire social not via a flow of shit or a wave of incest that Oedipus arrives, but via the decoded flows of capital-money but via the decoded flows of capital-money. The waves of incest and shit are only secondary derivatives of the latter, insofar well: The initial theme of the key myth is the incest committed by the hero with the mother. Yet the idea it is he who is killed This curious indifference toward incest appears in other myths. Oedipus is first the idea of he who is murdering these investments and object choices as defenses against incest? (Thus the familial romance, or Oedipus's own wish to have crime.) Must these be understood as compromises and substitutes for incest? (Thus in The Wolf Man, the peasant girl as a

The Oedipus a displaced image of desiring-production that represents the repressed as incestuous familial drives. In this way the family / drives relationship patient manifested a strong hatred for her mother and an incestuous desire for her father, but under conditions of reality loss drawn by Adler and Cartry: It is customary to consider incestuous relations in myth either as the expression of the desire and names—son, sister, mother, brother, father. Now in the incestuous act we can have persons at our disposal, but they suppression. It must result from the repressing action of the incestuous representation, which is not yet by any means a complex couch. to make it so that the analytic situation is incestuous in its essence. so that it is its own proof

To quote Artaud once again bear on incestuous desires, it would thereby gain a certain independence and primacy, as a condition for constituting a system of difference in nature between the two repressions. But a real independence cannot be concluded from this. Psychic repression is such that of its object, on which it bestows the appearance of independence. Strictly speaking, psychic repression is a means in the service scission through the constant formation of new lineages aspiring to independence, with capitalization of alliances and filiation. But such a however, wants to explain what it signifies, to assert an independence of its signified—against the despot, says the law. For relation between independent terms; it has taken upon itself the independence, the quality of the terms and the quantity of the societies in such a way that they never achieve any independence (the blacksmith, the astronomer). But the decoding of flows in does it confer on its scientists and its technicians an independence that was unknown in the previous regimes. Doubtless it can subject. It is precisely on this point that the statutory independence of sexuality with regard to generation rests. Szondi senses this of which he was able to denounce in Freud: the independence of sexuality with regard to reproduction, the subordination of progressive or parts of the desiring-machines are recognized by their mutual independence, such that nothing in the one depends or should depend	p 189 p 195 p 202 p 207 p 213 p 227 p 233 p 233 p 290 p 291 p 323

these signs? The support is the body without organs. These indifferent signs follow no plan, they function at all levels and desire was incapable of investing immediately. He then became rather indifferent to the fact that this beyond derives from the familial example than this to show that the parental figures are indifferent inductors and that the true organizer is elsewhere—on the within the workings of the unconscious, as inductors of an indifferent nature, yet the role of organizer continues to be entrusted family is a stimulus—but a stimulus that is qualitatively indifferent, an inductor that is neither an organizer nor a disorganizer chain, the parents are there as ordinary stimuli of an indifferent nature that trigger the becoming of adventures, of races, and etc., no flow is privileged in this language, which remains indifferent to its substance or its support, inasmuch as the latter as a general equivalent represents an abstract quantity that is indifferent to the qualified nature of the flows. But the equivalence and vitalism. Here the fundamental traits of synthesis are the indifferent nature of the chemical signals, the indifference to the substrate to the intervention of compounds that are chemically foreign and indifferent to this reaction. The way in which allosteric interactions work the connections are transverse, the disjunctions included, the conjunctions polyvocal, indifferent to their underlying support, since this matter that serves them	p 38 p 58 p 92 p 92 p 98 p 114 p 240 p 248 p 288 p 288 p 309

Even those who are best impossible, with everything obliged to pass by way of an indifferent neutral energy, that energy emanating from Oedipus and capable of genetic code. In other terms, forms of gregariousness are never indifferent: they refer back to the qualified forms that produce them the stimulus and the organizer, parents are stimuli having an indifferent value that trigger the allocation of gradients or zones of investment, both in point of fact and by statute: an indifferent stimulus at the beginning, an extrinsic result at the point about the necessity for money in the cure, remains supremely indifferent to the question of who is footing the bill. The disjunctions characteristic of these chains still do not involve the point of his regression, in order to give him indirect symbolic satisfactions that would allow him to resume a progression actual productivity that is not to be confused with an indirect or symbolic satisfaction, and that, in its stops as in instead of making it—and the inscriptions themselves—into an indirect means of universal exchange. There is a question that Marcel of flows, instead of still referring, in a direct or indirect form, to despotic overcoding. This seems to us to be the characteristic object of codes is therefore to establish necessarily indirect relations among these qualified and therefore incommensurable codes. Such relations in the block of finite debt). All these code characteristics—indirect, qualitative, and limited—are sufficient to show that a code value of code. Hence the code relation is not only indirect, qualitative, and limited; because of these very characteristics, it is into play couplings between qualified flows, interactions that are exclusively indirect, qualitative composites that are essentially limited, and organs of perception borne in mind that the differential relation is not an indirect relation between qualified or coded flows, it is a direct of desire. The link between the two remains secondary and indirect, both in the new means appropriated by desire and in the chemical signals, the indifference to the substrate, and the indirect character of the interactions. Such formulas as these are negative inorganization of the molecular elements: partial objects that enter into indirect syntheses or interactions, since they are not partial (partiels) in syntheses, or—what amounts to the same thing—in the indirect nature of the interactions under consideration. The infinite creditor and infinite credit have replaced the blocks of mobile and finite debts as in Lewis Carroll's song, the long song about the infinite debt: A man may surely claim his dues: But, when that on this full body renders the movement of debt infinite. It is a measure of Nietzsche's force to have stressed deity, the immobile organizer of the bricks and of their infinite circuit. 7 Barbarian or Imperial Representation Incest with the sister the latter more foreign, more ruthless, more definitive, or more infinite with respect to desiring-production. But this migration would never be center: all the debts of alliance are converted into the infinite debt of the new alliance, and all the extended filiations despot himself: it is the juridical form assumed by the infinite debt. The jurist will be seen in the despot's procession against the creditor when necessary, so as to consolidate the infinite debt. As vengeance, and a vengeance exercised in advance, the things that Nietzsche partially grasped in the evolution of the infinite debt. The Oedipal cell will have to complete its migration the displaced represented. The debt must not only become an infinite debt, it will have to be internalized and spiritualized as it will have to be internalized and spiritualized as an infinite debt (Christianity and what follows). The father and the son and this must occur as a direct consequence of the infinite debt that is now internalized. Oedipus-the-despot will have to be supraterrrestrial field that increasingly overcodes, forming a metaphysical system. The infinite debt must become internalized at the same time as it conditions of flux imply conditions of reflux, giving to the infinite debt its capitalist form; but the State as a regulator Schmitt finds strange lyrical words to characterize this flow of infinite debt: an instantaneous creative flow that the banks create spontaneously wall: which again shows that the death of writing is infinite, so long as it arises and arrives from within.) Similarly the beast of the reproduction of capital, internalization of the infinite debt. I too am a slave—these are the new more and more internalized: this describes the evolution of the infinite debt—through Catholicism, then the Reformation. The extreme spiritualization of is that psychoanalysis has much difficulty extracting itself from an infinite regression: the father must have been a child, but was Pangymnastikon and a general pedagogical system). Everything changes, then: the infinite regression forced us to postulate a primacy of the father purely spiritual are anything but disturbances of equilibrium in an infinite series of levers, beginning with those levers that are too world, by attributing to it the new form of an infinite subjective representation. We seem to be straying from the main pole in the very movement of capitalism, which substitutes the infinite subjective representation for the large determinate objective representations. It is recent authors: the theater elicits the finite structure of the infinite subjective representation. What is meant by elicit is very complex when it ceases to be objective, when it becomes subjective infinite—that is to say, imaginary—effectively loses all consistency, unless representation. The series of this representation now presents itself: (imaginary) infinite subjective representation-theatrical representation-structural representation. And precisely because the theater is desiring-production, but between the two poles of subjective representation, as infinite imaginary representation, and as finite structural representation. Thereafter it is nothing happens; nothing left but images that revolve within the infinite subjective representation. We will muster all our strength so as turn—desexualization and sublimation—if not divine acceptance of, and infinite resignation to, bad conscience, which consists for the woman of it continues to turn while treading its own underfoot; the infinite series of juxtaposed and unlocalized parks in Watt still contains even in the system of despotic terror, where debt becomes infinite and where death experiences an elevation that tends to make to cure neurosis, since, for it, curing consists of an infinite maintenance, an infinite resignation, an accession to desire by way	p 5 p 36 p 36 p 65 p 68 p 108 p 108 p 162 p 192 p 194 p 196 p 197 p 197 p 197 p 198 p 199 p 200 p 202 p 209 p 213 p 213 p 216 p 217 p 217 p 217 p 222 p 229 p 237 p 243 p 254 p 268 p 274 p 274 p 284 p 303 p 304 p 305 p 305 p 306 p 307 p 308 p 311 p 315 p 337 p 361

This is because the despotic signifier aims at the reconstitution of desiring-machines that are in opposition to the structures, and the intensities that are in opposition to the spaces? The explanation is the realm of physics; the body without organs and its intensities are not metaphors, but matter itself. Nor is it our particles, the bions. These are often described contrary, they are all positive in relationship to the zero intensity that designates the full body without organs. And they undergo hallucinatory phenomena: they designate, first of all, a band of intensity, a zone of intensity on his body without organs. The first of all, a band of intensity, a zone of intensity on his body without organs. The body without organs is be stimulated to produce within itself. Nothing but bands of intensity, potentials, thresholds, and gradients. A harrowing, emotionally overwhelming experience, which	p 18 p 19 p 19 p 19 p 19
point where the mind touches matter and lives its every intensity, consumes it? And shouldn't this question immediately compel us to falls, produce a series of intensive states based on the intensity = 0 that designates the body without organs (but what but rather identifying the names of history with zones of intensity on the body without organs; and each time Nietzsche-as-subject exclaims singular state can, according to its more or less forceful intensity, bring about a deactualization of the institution itself and denounce if everything commingles in this fashion it does so in intensity, with no confusion of spaces and forms, since these have displacement of races and of continents, this feeling of raw intensity that presides over delirium as well as over hallucinations, and quite different: identifying races, cultures, and gods with fields of intensity on the body without organs, identifying personages with states that brought back to everything he had left. A drop in intensity to the body without organs = 0, autism: the schizo viewpoint of perception, but identifications of names with regions of intensity that provide the impetus toward other still more intense regions is displacing himself in space, his is a journey in intensity, around the desiring-machine that is erected here and remains here everywhere, on every side, at every level, differing only in intensity. The same included being traverses indivisible distances on the full even a distinction of sexes, but only prepersonal variations in intensity, taking on the same twinness or bisexuality in differing degrees is a question of knowing how, starting from this primary intensity, it will be possible to pass to a system in passes on the cosmic egg. Everything must be interpreted in intensity. The egg and the placenta itself, swept by an unconscious opposition between the two genealogies and the two filiations: in intensity and in extension, the intense germinal order and the extensive of one and the same being or flow, varying in intensity according to inclusive disjunctions. But that is precisely the problem in each case for the part of the flow of intensity that passes through, for what does not pass, and for primitive socius. In the first place, the germinal influx of intensity conditions all representation: it is the representative of desire. But village, and all the positions of a chief lived in intensity within the group. We said that the point of departure and becoming according to domains of presence or zones of intensity (voluptas). very much like the extreme states of a reconstituted, re-created intensity. With his sister the despot simulates a zero state from explained by factors that counteract the falling tendency—the increasing intensity of the exploitation of human labor, the diminution of the connections of a molecular order, their distribution into maps of intensity on the giant molecule of the body without organs, and body without organs that fills the space each time an intensity fills it; signs of desire that compose a signifying chain the matter that always fills space to given degrees of intensity, and the partial objects are these degrees, these intensive parts is catatonic schizophrenia that gives its model to death. Zero intensity. The death model appears when the body without organs repels and for life, in every passage or becoming, in every intensity as passage or becoming. It is in the very nature or becoming. It is in the very nature of every intensity to invest within itself the zero intensity starting from which nature of every intensity to invest within itself the zero intensity starting from which it is produced, in one moment, as an afflux is necessary merely to signify the absence of intensity). We have attempted to show in this respect how the the becoming-another-sex, the becoming-god, the becoming-a-race, etc., forming zones of intensity on the body without organs. Every intensity controls within its	p 210 p 232 p 289 p 309 p 327 p 329 p 330 p 330 p 330 p 330 p 330 p 330 forming zones of intensity on the body without organs. Every intensity controls within its own life the experience of death, and envelops it. And it is doubtless the case that every intensity is extinguished at the end, that every becoming itself becomes this way as an I, all the while undoing the intensity, carrying it back to the zero that envelops it. From do not portray anything, that merely designate zones of libidinal intensity on the body without organs, and that are emitted, captured value that trigger the allocation of gradients or zones of intensity on the body without organs: it is in relation to social field of desire, which alone designates the zones of intensity, with all the beings that populate these zones and determine	p 330 p 330 p 331 p 352 p 355 p 355

by means of it? The answer would seem to be: intensive quantities. There is a schizophrenic experience of intensive quantities in to be: intensive quantities. There is a schizophrenic experience of intensive quantities in their pure state, to a point that is forces of attraction and repulsion produces an open series of intensive elements, all of them positive, that are never an expression which a subject passes. The Kantian theory according to which intensive quantities fill up, to varying degrees, matter that has no of soaring ascents and plunging falls, produce a series of intensive states based on the intensity = 0 that designates the engender oneself. At the same time he points out the intensive nature of this interplay: the part has nothing to do each subject of either sex, he takes into consideration an intensive series of instincts, affects, and relations that link the normal the two. In exclusive disjunctions, parental appellations no longer designate intensive states through which the subject passes on the body without	p 18 p 18 p 19 p 19 p 21 p 41 p 51 p 78

that form the material for subsequent hallucinations and deliriums. The intensive emotion, the affect, is both the common root and the undone on behalf of a new order: the intense and intensive order. What is the nature of this order? The first are produced only within fields of forces expressly defined by intensive vibrations, and that animate cruel personages only in so far within complexes of forces that determine persons as so many intensive states embodied in a criminal, ceaselessly passing beyond a threshold	p 84 p 85 p 85 p 86 persons with regions, thresholds, or effects in a production of intensive quantities. The theory of proper names should not be conceived the real is a product that envelops the distances within intensive quantities. The indivisible is enveloped, and signifies that what envelops to become the Real and its artifice. To seize an intensive real as produced in the coextension of nature and history but a series of singularities in the disjunctive network, Or intensive states in the conjunctive tissue, and a transpositional subject moving transference or the doctor-patient relationship, Freudian psychoanalysis made a somewhat intensive use of the family. The situation is which refers for its part to the preconscious investments of interest. Not only does one thereby fail to correctly evaluate social difference in nature with regard to the preconscious investments of interest, the unconscious investments of desire had sexuality as an index and what is their relationship with the preconscious investments of interest? We have seen that the unconscious paranoid investment was grounded	p 350 p 361 p 365 p 367
The system teems with preconscious investments of class and of interest. And capitalists first have an interest in capitalism. A statement of class and of interest. And capitalists first have an interest in capitalism. A statement as commonplace as this is made as this is made for another purpose: capitalists have an interest in capitalism only through the tapping of profits that they one can then understand that people whose preconscious investments of interest do not, or should not, go in the direction of In the first case, they confine and localize their preconscious interest in wage increases and the improvement of the standard of Brezhnev). And how, indeed, could one fail to find one's interest in the hole where one has sunk it, at the the second case, there is truly a new investment of interest, new aims that presuppose another body than that of capital-money that of capital-money; those exploited become conscious of their preconscious interest, and this interest is truly revolutionary—a major break from those exploited become conscious of their preconscious interest, and this interest is truly revolutionary—a major break from the standpoint of the same form of relationship, with the preconscious investments of interest. On the one hand, in fact, the investment of interest interest. On the one hand, in fact, the investment of interest fundamentally conceals the paranoid investment of desire, and reinforces it means, of aims and reasons; or else the investment of interest itself gives rise to and creates those interests that rationalize inevitable sequences of causality. In the other case, the preconscious interest must on the contrary discover the necessity for a different the destiny of the revolution is linked solely to the interest of the dominated and exploited masses. But it is the most sinister forms of dissuasion are invented; the repression of interest is reinforced—but where will the new irruption of desire all minimized the importance of preconscious investments of class or interest, which are based in the infrastructure itself. any subject would sacrifice a very large part of its interests. Like all the other breaks, the subjective break is not subjects, individuals, or groups act manifestly counter to their class interests—when they rally to the interests and ideals of a counter to their class interests—when they rally to the interests and ideals of a class that their own objective situation investments are made, or should be made, according to the interests of the opposing classes. But unconscious investments are made according of desire and uses of synthesis, very different from the interests of the subject, individual or collective, who desires. These investments it is effectively invested by desire and no longer by interests. A form of social production and reproduction, along with its as such, in whole or in part, independently of the interests of the desiring-subject. It was not by means of a repression bears on desire—and not solely on needs or interests—only by means of sexual repression. The family is indeed to deny itself in the name of the more important interests of civilization (what if everyone did the same, what if for the rapid diffusion that the Freudian account enjoyed. What interests us is the precise role of the Oedipus complex in of discovering the preconscious investments of a social field by interests, but—more profoundly—its unconscious investments by desire, such as desire? And how far does desire go beyond so-called objective interests, when it is a question of flows to set in functions of a capital that has secured for itself direct interests in production. As a general rule, State controls and regulations is situated there, between unconscious group desires and preconscious class interests. It is only starting from this point, as we shall representative forms of class consciousness, and the nature of the interests and the process of their realization. Reich always comes back I pull out my gun.) Desire can never be deceived. Interests can be deceived, unrecognized, or betrayed, but not desire. Whence be explained. It happens that one desires against one's own interests: capitalism profits from this, but so does socialism, the party it, and not the contrary. It is doubtless true that interests predispose us to a given libidinal investment, but they are the preconscious indicators of a degree of development; the apparent interests and aims are merely the preconscious exponents of a social the chance to participate, under the cover of aims and interests. The fact remains that there exists a disinterested love of the right place where, according to the aims and the interests assigned to us, one feels something moving that has neither at the level of the unconscious desires and the preconscious interests. The preconscious revolutionary break is sufficiently well defined by the social production that creates, distributes, and satisfies new aims and interests. But the unconscious revolution does not merely refer to the from the standpoint of its libidinal investments, Truly revolutionary preconscious interests do not necessarily imply unconscious investments of the same nature a car, credit, a loan, girl-boy relationships) ahead of their interests (work, savings, a good marriage). But what appears to other hard for him to appear reasonable, by appealing to collective interests and goals, reforms to be brought about, sometimes even revolutions silent majority. The explanation is that, beneath preconscious goals and interests, a uniquely unconscious investment rises up that embraces a full rise to incomparable loves, which are not explained by their interests, since interests derive from them instead. At the deepest level incomparable loves, which are not explained by their interests, since interests derive from them instead. At the deepest level of society a full body without organs, beyond the preconscious aims and interests that it assigns and distributes. The fact remains that such of day: it must always hide under assignable aims or interests presented as the general aims and interests, even though in assignable aims or interests presented as the general aims and interests, even though in reality the latter represent only the members of a simple revolutionary break with regard to aims and interests, and finally re-forms a merely specific reterritoriality, a specific body character of the paranoid investment under an existing order of interests, of causes and means, of aims and reasons; or else investment of interest itself gives rise to and creates those interests that rationalize the paranoid investment; or yet again, an effectively entire production of desire in the name of the higher interests of the revolution and the inevitable sequences of causality. In as well as a calling in question of aims and interests. it may launch a counterinvestment whereby revolutionary desire is plugged into the existing social field as a source of energy. (The slowly wind down to a close or gradually die away into silence. The artist is the master of objects; he puts of the process (even though these conditions do not come into being at some later stage). That is why technical machines is not an original primordial entity that later projects itself into different sorts of socius, as though it were a raving everywhere as best he can, he plunges further and further into the realm of deterritorialization, reaching the furthest limits of the defined as the psychiatry that introduces the concept of production into consideration of the problem of desire, it cannot avoid posing related to a continual material flow (hyle) that it cuts into. It functions like a ham-slicing machine, removing portions from the conditions this continuity: it presupposes or defines what it cuts into as an ideal continuity. This is because, as we have and the continuous flux, the interruption and the connection, fuse into one: everywhere there are breaks-flows out of which desire wells live, eat, defecate, and sleep only if he is plugged into machines provided with motors, wires, lights, carburetors, propellers, and steering his parents to which the child reacts by turning himself into a machine. But even Bettelheim, who has a noticeable bias as to produce the child-machine? How has the process turned into an end in itself? Or how has the child become second place, every machine has a sort of code built into it, stored up inside it. This code is inseparable not follow no plan, they function at all levels and enter into any and every sort of connection; each one speaks its labeled the Signifier-writing that ceaselessly composes and decomposes the chains into signs that have nothing that impels them to become signifying Cutting into the flows (le prelevement du flux) involves detachment of something all what such a theory presupposes: the introduction of desire into neurology. The third type of interruption or break characteristic of the machine, but also a part that is itself divided into parts that correspond to the detachments from the chain (detachements to them as a new part fabricated separately. While I was saying that he was going into dark mummy, he said twice in a questioning way: Nurse no longer familial relations. But since these relations supposedly come into being at a later stage in life, there are only of an analytic afterward; or else that these relations bring into play a nonsexual energy, for which sexuality has merely served his legs as though it were an oar, he goes into the kitchen, into the study, he runs toy cars back though it were an oar, he goes into the kitchen, into the study, he runs toy cars back and forth. It amazing nonfamilial experience that psychoanalysis has completely failed to take into account. Lindner's painting attracts our attention once again. It is one hand, for each subject of either sex, he takes into consideration an intensive series of instincts, affects, and relations that this seems called for. On the other hand, he takes into consideration the coexistence in extension of the subjects themselves and full scope only in structural interpretation. Structural interpretation makes Oedipus into a kind of universal Catholic symbol, beyond all the imaginary

Catholic symbol, beyond all the imaginary modalities. It makes Oedipus into a referential axis not only for the pre-oedipal phases, but is of course repositioned on the Oedipal axis, set back into the Oedipal orbit in the perspective, for example, of the the strain of an endless repression? What we are calling into question is the frantic Oedipalization to which psychoanalysis devotes itself Anna's coughing machine, and also all the explanatory apparatuses set into motion by Freud, all those neurobiologico-desiring-machines. And the discovery of the unconscious, even if the work of transformation is taken into account? Groddeck remained more faithful than Freud to an autoproduction little that he makes the familial romance, on the contrary, into a mere dependence on Oedipus, and that he neuroticizes everything is fitted over the co-ordinates of Oedipus, which translate it into pre-oedipal, para-oedipal, quasioedipal, etc. The desiring-machines are always there, but a schizophrenic flash, one day we bring our tape recorder into the analyst's office—stop!—with this insertion of a desiring-machine of the forcing employed to introduce Oedipus, to inject it into the unconscious. Then Oedipus fell back on and appropriated desiring-production of Oedipus do not form a triangle, but exist shattered into all corners of the social field—the mother on the the father next to the colonel. Group fantasy is plugged into and machined on the socius. Being fucked by the socius out, we see that the individual fantasy is itself plugged into the existing social field, but apprehends it in the form as the immortality conferred on the existing social order carried into the ego all the investments of repression, the phenomena of desire and the social field, by making the death instinct into a veritable institutional creativity. For that is precisely the criterion of his personal identity but not of his singularities, enters into relations with others following the communication proper to partial objects others following the communication proper to partial objects: everyone passes into the body of the other on the body without organs fantasy only its lines of exclusive disjunction, and flattens it into its individual or pseudoindividual dimensions, which by their very nature and Freud reproaches himself for not having taken them sufficiently into account. The first of these factors is the rock of which means that the quantity of libido does not branch into two variable forces corresponding to heterosexuality and homosexuality, but creates is beyond territoriality, because he has carried his flows right into the desert. But what remains, once we learn that resistances boxes, the vessels all have their positive determinations, and enter into aberrant communication following a transversal that runs through the whole apart like a face drawn in sand, Albertine's face shatters into molecular partial objects, while those on the narrator's face rejoin them, any more than they exist prior to the triangulation into which they enter: desire receives its first complete objects and the possibility for its own failure or stagnation, by falling into the undifferentiated as the reverse side of the differentiation created sense that the Oedipal inscription does not force its way into the synthesis of recording without reacting on the synthesis of parental or familial use of the synthesis of recording extends into a conjugal use, or an alliance use, of the connective in this binarity, the body without organs that reinjects producing into the product, extends the connections of machines, and serves as biunivocal process is in fact produced that would fit production into the mold of representatives; no triangulation appears at this level is a common-universal for the sole purpose of introducing lack into desire, in situating and specifying persons and an ego under and its trinitary expression, money as detachable chain is converted into capital as detached object, which exists only in the fetishist the libido as energy of selection and detachment is converted into the phallus as detached object, the latter existing only in is this conversion that makes the whole of sexuality shift into the Oedipal framework: this projection of all the breaks-flows onto the same mythical locale, and all the non signifying signs into the same major signifier. The effective triangulation makes it possible lost their virulence and efficacy, once they had been introduced into a use of synthesis that remains fundamentally illegitimate with regard schizoanalysis. 4 The Disjunctive Synthesis of Recording When Oedipus slips into the disjunctive syntheses of desiring-recording, it imposes the ideal of

of a larger reality (omnitudo realitatis); Kant's humor makes God into the master of a syllogism. The sign of different corporations have been largely ignored or else assimilated into the all-important descent concept. Thus Fortes (1953), while recognizing that still must detach themselves from the productive process and pass into the element of recording that appropriates them for itself as of dominance. That is why it is essential to take into consideration how ties of alliance combine concretely with relations of terms of a structure unfolding in the mind, one relapses into an ideology of large segments that makes alliance depend on in an accelerated fashion his entire filiation, and contracts it into a point that keeps him in a direct relationship with acquired-prestige or distributed-consumption type. Oedipus is the baited image cultural material (des contenus culturels), even if it is brought into relation with an ethnic unconscious—as seen in attempted parallelisms of his father, whose favorite he was, and has entered into marriage with paternal cousins. But with the death of his of the incisor, the soothsayer and the medicine man launch into a social analysis concerning the territory and its environs, the have not recognized the chieftainship; the impoverished village is falling into decrepitude (the two sectors of the village result from a the Ndembu analysis was never Oedipal: it was directly plugged into social organization and disorganization; sexuality itself, through the women and a delirium, when it stuffs it with all its might into the symbolic void of the father. Or rather, if it who curse the White Man, the young people who enter into a political struggle, etc. Both are true: the colonized resists in his own name, he allowed himself to be taken into the care of the traditional therapists and the familial group care of the traditional therapists and the familial group, or into that of the medical practice of medicines. At times, the through phylogenetic heredity. And the other pole, which makes Oedipus into a structure, a pole whose extreme position argues the possibility and of being pious. Already Geza Roheim proposed organizing primitives into a series of variables converging toward the structural neotenic constant is the part of this production that does not enter into social production or reproduction. It is what would introduce disorder or reproduction. It is what would introduce disorder and revolution into the socius, the noncoded flows of desire. The part that acknowledges that culturalism started on the right track: introducing desire into production, strengthening the link between instinctual and economic structure; and lived first by the child as a microcosm, then projected into the adult and social development (devenir). From this point of this-side-of incest, as in the Yourougou myth, which introduces disorder into the world by acting as the representative of desire. Whence the task of displacing the limit: causing it to pass into the interior of the socius, in the middle, between a by digging an artificial river bed, or by diverting it into a thousand shallow little streams. Oedipus is this displaced limit the chain must be converted, by virtue of this independence, into a transcendent detached object that crushes their polyvocal character; the causes passage of the detachable fragments without ever converting them into a detached object—no reduction whatever, no application is possible the formula 3+1 (the four corners of the field folded into three, like a tablecloth, plus the transcendent term that performs it is engineering: organic, social, linguistic, etc., elements, all tossed into the same pot to stew. The only unities-multiplicities that functionalism in the body of the subject, and transforms the latter into a man-animal; the residual conjunction that causes the residue to such a flow, and with what passes from one state into another through the break. As Leach says, hair as a ritual is sexual, or if it is necessary to take into account political, economic, and religious dimensions that would go beyond despot, who clearly invokes an entire political history that brings into conflict the despotic machine and the old primitive territorial machine derive both the negation and the persistence of autochthony, brought into clear relief by Levi-Strauss. But this is not enough to statistical formations (complexes), at the end of a history bringing into play the destiny of social machines, their regime compared to But the agents (les instances) that come to carry them into effect are themselves variable; there are migrations in the system lesser chance of causing their connections and interactions to pass into the regime of the social machines; according to whether the primitive socius desire is not yet trapped, not yet introduced into a set of impasses, the flows have lost none of its effects on desiring-production, it is therefore necessary to take into account not only the elements of representation as they are inscription process, instead of making it—and the inscriptions themselves—into an indirect means of universal exchange. There is a question form whereby the unconscious social reality of exchange is converted into cash. What is involved is not a theoretical discussion of theft that prevents the gift and the counter-gift from entering into an exchange relation. Desire knows nothing of exchange, it knows exchanging, but inscribing or marking. And when exchange is made into an unconscious reality, structural rights are invoked in vain—along of the socius, with the correctives that must be introduced into this conception so that the structure is able to function there is a tendency to make the system in extension into a logical combinative arrangement, instead of taking it for what movement as it is described on the socius, without taking into account the real instance that inscribes it, and the forces open, finite debts, the parcels of destiny—finds itself taken into an immense machinery that renders the debt infinite and no filiation with the deity: the people must follow. A leap into a new alliance, a break with the ancient filiation—this the dream of a spiritual empire, wherever temporal empires fall into decadence. It may be that the enterprise is primarily military that it is primarily religious, the military discipline being converted into internal asceticism and cohesion. It may be that the paranoiac and his Saint Paul. Moses flees from the Egyptian machine into the wilderness and installs his new machine there, a holy chain; in place of flow selections, all the flows converge into a great river that constitutes the sovereign's consumption: a radical way that is incomprehensible to me they have pushed right into the capital, although it is a long way from the or already beyond it, having fallen back, as it were, into a this-side-of that is residual and transformed? (Related question: what signs of the earth, and that makes the earth itself into the object of a State ownership of property, or an disjunctive synthesis that entails an overflow of the old filiations into the direct filiation, gathering all the subjects into the new old filiations into the direct filiation, gathering all the subjects into the new machine. The essential action of the State, therefore to the appropriated surplus value and to the usufruct put into use, to the State machine and to the territorial machines the concrete base and beginning, but their segments here enter into relationships corresponding to the essence, they assume precisely this form assume precisely this form of bricks that ensures their integration into the higher unity, and their distributive operation, consonant with the formation, and mutually adjust insofar as the one is imbricated into the other, but the new inscription cements the whole and new inscription cements the whole and brings producers and products into relations with itself (they do not need to speak the all the alliances and filiations, prolongs them, makes them converge into the direct filiation of the despot with the deity, and the coded flows of the primitive machine are now forced into a bottleneck, where the despotic machine overcodes them. Overcoding is of a new inscription that overcodes, and that makes desire into the property of the sovereign, even though he be the filiation. He begins by marrying the sister. But he enters into this forbidden endogamous marriage outside the tribe, inasmuch as he in the tribe, as the hero finds her in penetrating into the tribe, or finds her again in returning to the already seen in psychosis, where the intrusion of the complex into consciousness, according to the traditional criterion, did not, to be this clearly); it is the imperial formation that makes graphism into a system of writing in the proper sense of the which must yield its place to the socius in extension, into which the intensities in question pass or fail to pass longer dances, it ceases to animate bodies, but is set into writing on tablets, stones, and books; the eye sets itself opacity of the rigid Arab verse; speech (le verbe) rigidifies into formulas whose power is ensured by the truth of the clear away problems of meaning and signification, or be resolved into the coexistence of phonematic elements, where the signified is no signified is reduced to the value of coexisting minimal terms into which the signifier decomposes; but the other vertical, where the overcodes another language, while the other language is completely coded into phonetic elements. And if the unconscious in fact includes the a common absence, the authority that channels all the breaks-flows into one and the same locus of one and the same to the center: all the debts of alliance are converted into the infinite debt of the new alliance, and all the carry the assassinated, dismembered, dis-organ-ized, filed-down body of the despot into the latrines of the city. Wasn't it already the anus the autonomous or quasi-autonomous sectors; but it is now bricked into the State apparatus, which at times organizes it and at guarantee against despotism, an immanent principle that unites the parts into a whole, that makes of this whole the object of or anybody (the democratic conception of law will make this into a criterion). The complex relationship of designation, as we have sign becomes a signifier, a formidable quantity of reaction passes into a latent state; all the resonance and all the retention from without. The founders of empires caused everything to pass into a latent state; they invented vengeance and incited resentment, that chain between masters and slaves; the introduction of the law into desire, and of desire into the law; the terrible latency the introduction of the law into desire, and of desire into the law; the terrible latency with its afterward or its this investment and not the reverse. At first it brings into play only the despot, the sister, and the mother: it characterized by State ownership of property, with communal possession bricked into it, and collective dependence. Every form that is more evolved an Etruscan under the Romans. And yet their origin sinks into oblivion, a latency that lays hold of the State itself commodity production, that the State witnesses its decline. Land enters into the sphere of private property and into that of commodities decline. Land enters into the sphere of private property and into that of commodities. Classes appear, inasmuch as the dominant classes apparatus. At first situated adjacent to communal property, then entering into the latter's composition or conditioning it, then becoming more and opposed classes. But how does one explain both this latency into which the despotic State enters, and this power with which of reflection (terror) that organizes the parts and the flows into a whole. What is transected, supersected, or overcoded by the the myth constitutes itself within this distance, it makes it into the very object of its narrative, retracing the avatars of not only presupposes an abstract despotic State that it divides into segments according to the regime of its private property and social system; it is itself determined by the social system into which it is incorporated in the exercise of its functions repressed cruelty of the animal-man made inward and scared back into himself, the creature imprisoned in the state so as to rise of capitalist production, but the insertion of the bourgeoisie into a town and State feudalism that consists in devising codes becomes the death instinct, latency, but it also passes over into these flows that carry the seeds of a new life excess consumption of a class, that it makes luxury itself into a means of investment, and reduces all the decoded flows social body. What is more, each of these elements brings into play several processes of decoding and deterritorialization having very different very early an active factor in production, either by turning into an industrialist himself in occupations based on commerce, or by himself in occupations based on commerce, or by making artisans into his own intermediaries or employees (the struggles against the guilds apparent movement of commodities, since the abstract labor is divided into qualified pieces of labor to which a given determinate quantum when a general equivalent appears as money that one enters into the reign of the quantitas, which can have all sorts its own at its disposal, and why it is inserted into the interstices of the pre-existing social body. The merchant is in a relationship of alliance with noncapitalist production; it enters into the new alliance that characterizes precapitalist States—whence the alliance the relations of commodities, it enters now, so to say, into relations with itself. It differentiates itself as original value from phenomenon of the transformation of the surplus value of code into a surplus value of flux. The fact that a mathematical viewpoint of capitalism's entire field of immanence, and by taking into account the conditions under which a surplus value of code conditions under which a surplus value of code is transformed into a surplus value of flux. First of all, it appears hiding: that it is not the same money that goes into the pocket of the wage earner and is entered on desire. One of Keynes's contributions was the reintroduction of desire into the problem of money; it is this that must be to the two boards, the two inscriptions, the one going into the account of the wage earner, the other into the going into the account of the wage earner, the other into the balance sheet of the enterprise. Measuring the two orders conditions of the transformation of the surplus value of code into a surplus value of flux. In defining precapitalist regimes by a generalized decoding that converted this surplus value of code into a surplus value of flux, we were presenting things in of socially decoded flows of code that these scientists organize into axiomatics of research that is said to be basic. But physics, with its corpuscular flows, will have to be brought into line with determinism.) The true axiomatic is that of the realization, and that ensures the integration of groups and individuals into the system. Not only lack amid overabundance, but stupidity in guaranteeing the emission of both, and by constantly injecting antiproduction into the producing apparatus. animate our arts and our sciences, just as they congeal into the production of our own sick, the schizophrenics. We have the schizophrenic process and transforming the subject of the process into a confined clinical entity, as though it saw in this death coming from within? Why does it make the schizophrenic into a sick person not only nominally but in reality? Why is a question of binding the schizophrenic charges and energies into a world axiomatic that always opposes the revolutionary potential of processes of deterritorialization; and on whether money burns or bursts into flames. Why not merely say that capitalism replaces one code that capitalism replaces one code with another, that it carries into effect a new type of coding? For two reasons, one different sorts of flows, but these quantities do not enter into equivalences that would presuppose an unlimited something; they simply form temporally distinct from that of labor, and consequently must enter into a composite that is itself qualitative and implies noneconomic factors only signifying in a secondary way, insofar as it calls into play couplings between qualified flows, interactions that are exclusively indirect expresses the capitalist transformation of the surplus value of code into a surplus value of flux. Whence the fundamental change in the latter is merged qualitatively and temporally with labor itself into one and the same simple magnitude (the condition characterized by it becomes immanent to the field of social forces, enters into their service, and serves as a regulator of the decoded the circumstances were not right for these flows to enter into a conjunction, the State could be content to save fragments its power in order to enter with so much force into the service of the signs of economic power. And capitalism industrialist or banker and the worker, but only a fusion into one and the same flow as with profits and wages draws from the machine an undivided flow of income convertible into consumer and production goods, a flow on which profits and between, on the one hand, the decoded flows that enter into a class axiomatic on the full body of capital, and always effecting breaks of breaks that allowed it to integrate into its axiomatic sections of the newly recognized class, while throwing more controlled by official socialism than by capitalism itself—further into the distance, to flee periphery or into enclaves. Thus the capitalism itself—further into the distance, to flee periphery or into enclaves. Thus the only choice left was between the new another that would escape the axiomatic and throw the machine into a panic (a Chinese on the horizon, a Cuban missile-launcher as an applied axiomatic: what appears to come most freely into play in what is called the analytic dialogue, in fact himself cornered and cut along the line that divides him into an individual subject of the statement and an individual subject of the poles of its axiomatic, it makes the despot into one of its images. That is why Oedipus gathers up so well that the pylon blew up and fell back into its hole. From the Symbolic to the Imaginary, from castration is the economic, political, and cultural breaks of the field into which they are plunged (cf. Ndembu schizophrenia). This is the to substitute the individual fantasy that makes the real parents into so many innocents or even victims. For the family must conceals. To substitute, for the private subject of castration, split into a subject of enunciation and a subject of the statement refer to machinic arrangements. To overturn the theater of representation into the order of desiring-production: this is the whole task of the mother tends to be obliging: we mustn't make this into a scene, it's only a dream, a territoriality). Levi-Strauss puts hypothetical primacy that carried us to infinity, barring a shift into the position of an absolutely primary father; but it is in the first instance the investment of a social field into which the father and the child are plunged, simultaneously immersed remarks on occultism, constitutes in fact the norm, and pushes into the background the problems of hereditary transmission that animated the itself in fascism, the way in which it falls back into archaisms. Or, staying on the level of literary examples: the family-as-matrix for depersonalized partial objects, which plunge again and again into the torrential or depleted flux of a historic cosmos, a phenomena, and the molecular direction that on the contrary penetrates into singularities, their interactions and connections at a distance or between it strikes the wall, rebounds off it, and falls back into the most miserably arranged territorialities of the modern world as the positioning of its parts, but does not set itself into place any more than it forms or reproduces itself. This part, and that only, while the combination of the parts into a whole forms another department of the mechanical reproductive system of the animalcules—but rather in what this passage blossoms into. Once the structural unity of the machine has been undone assembly (montage), operating by nonlocalizable intercommunications and dispersed localizations, bringing into play processes of temporalization, fragmented formations, and detached parts, with conjunctions biunivocal; then desire does not need to project itself into these forms that have become opaque. These forms are immediately determinate conditions. By determinate conditions we mean those statistical forms into which the machines enter as so many stable forms, unifying	p 287 p 287

Thus the theater forces the play and the working of machines into the wings, behind a limit that has become impassable (exactly inverse relation, or double bind. All of production is conducted into the double impasse of subjective representation. Oedipus can always be shadows projected on a stage. The great territorialities have fallen into ruin, but the structure proceeds with all the subjective and real inorganization of the molecular elements: partial objects that enter into indirect syntheses or interactions, since they are not partial (partiels	p 303 p 307 p 307 p 308 p 309

We are told that Oedipus is indispensable, that it the appeased wish for a penis ... destined to be converted into a wish for a baby and for a husband, and ceases the instant one introduces a little desiring-machine—the tape-recorder—into the analyst's office; it ceases as soon as a flow a nonrepresented representative, or as a lack that juts out into the overfull (trop-plein) of a representation. But why return to dreams, why turn them into the royal road of desire and the unconscious, when they it, or make it turn in circles, and reterritorialize it into neurosis, perversion, and psychosis. To a point where the process identical by showing how the familial agent extends the one into the other. Between the two, however, the relationship is rather following praxis: (1) undoing all the reterritorializations that transform madness into mental illness; (2) liberating the schizoid movement of detrterritorialization in	p 316 p 316 p 318 p 320 p 321

What are your desiring-machines, what do you put into these machines, what is the output, how does it work an idea that reason imposes on the unconscious and introduces into the passional sphere, and is not by any means a which is going to neutralize—or on the contrary put into motion—the two activities, the two heads of desire. For organs-partial objects cling to the body without organs, and enter into the new syntheses of included disjunction and nomadic conjunction, of a part of the energy of production (Libido) being converted into a recording energy (Numen). But in fact, from the standpoint the corresponding chain effectively forms codes, inasmuch as it folds into exclusive molar configurations, it undoes the codes by unfolding along	p 321 p 321 p 322 p 323 p 326 p 326 p 327 p 328

death that rises from within (in the body without organs) into the death that comes from without (on the body without essence of desire as libido. But when the dualism passed into a death instinct against Eros, this was no longer a the life flows, capable of carrying them all the way into the desert and decoding them—even if this idea necessarily against death, by making this turned-back death (la mort retournee) into a force of desire by putting it in the service the overcoding of the flows of desire by introducing them into systems of representation that are themselves objective. Hence it can the splitting of the subjective essence (the identity in nature) into two functions, that of abstract labor alienated in private property repelled by an agency of psychic repression that would enter into compromises with them, but actually covered over by antiformations that machinery of desire. In contrast to psychoanalysis, which itself falls into the trap while causing the unconscious to fall into its falls into the trap while causing the unconscious to fall into its trap, schizoanalysis follows the lines of escape and the of repulsion (the body without organs / the machines-partial objects) into a condition of real functioning; ensuring this functioning in the each point ensuring the conversion of schizophrenia as a process into an effectively revolutionary force. For what is the schizo, if conformist, reactionary, and fascisizing investments, and the schizophrenic escape convertible into a revolutionary investment. Maurice Blanchot speaks admirably of this revolutionary	p 331 p 331 p 331 p 332 p 336 p 337 p 338 p 339 p 339 p 339 p 341 p 341
a more general level, the statistical transformation of molecular multiplicity into a molar constellation is what organizes lack on a large is not the distinction: the distinction to be made passes into the economic infrastructure itself and into its investments. Libidinal economy to be made passes into the economic infrastructure itself and into its investments. Libidinal economy is no less objective than political their creation, and the purpose of thereby converting the absurdity into spirituality. That is why it is so futile to attempt excluded from it, insofar as the great flow is converted into incomes, incomes of wages or of enterprises that define aims according to its capacity to introduce the flows of desire into a new code or a new axiomatic of interest; in libidinal investments are themselves revolutionary; it causes desire to penetrate into the social field, and subordinates the socius or the form finding medical means for rendering it public, for making it into an open secret, the analytic Oedipus? We are told, See his own Oedipus in a complex social context that brings into play the older half brother from the rich side of at the price of a splitting of the sexual object into a rich woman and a poor woman—and at other love it as its parents do. We always fall back into the false alternative where Freud was led by Oedipus, and sexual abode of the libido, and you will make daddy-mommy into the purely erotic motive. Oedipus: the touchstone of the pure animal or Blessed Virgin, and all at once. Everything passes into the machine that causes the properly familial determinations to disintegrate is itself the castrating apparatus, the machine for putting lack into desire, for drying up all the flows, and for making all the breaks from the outside and from the Real into one and the same break with the outside, with the the outside, where the analyst is concerned, too much penetrates into his office. Even the closed familial scene appears to him where the turgid little boy has already plugged a desiring-machine into a social machine, short-circuiting the parents, who can only intervene psychoses on the one hand, and the necessity for taking into account a social etiology on the other hand, has led a veritable impasse, a veritable contradiction, it is the one into which the researcher himself is led, when he claims to for a dissolution of the normal ego, he falls back into the worst familialist, personological, and egoic postulates, so that the role of a necessary relay for the transformation of social into mental alienation; what is more, one acts as if the its nonfamilial breaks and flows, invested as such, to enter into the family; hence, that the familial investments are always a cause for self-congratulation when one succeeds in transforming a schizo into a paranoiac or a neurotic. Such a transformation perhaps entails	p 342 p 345 p 345 p 345 p 346 p 348 p 348 p 351 p 353 p 353 p 354 p 354 p 355 p 357 p 357 p 357 p 358 p 359 p 360 p 360 p 361 p 361 p 361

The task of schizoanalysis is therefore to reach the investments of unconscious desire of the social field, insofar as they social field, insofar as they are differentiated from the preconscious investments of interest, and insofar as they are not merely capable discern, at the level of groups or individuals, the libidinal investments of the social field. Now in this respect it is	p 349 p 350 p 350 p 350
Freud more adventurous than in Gradiava. In short, our libidinal investments of the social field, reactionary or revolutionary, are so well well hidden, so unconscious, so well masked by the preconscious investments, that they appear only in our sexual choices of lovers	p 352 p 352

The desiring sexual relationships of man and exponents or the indicators, this time unconscious, of the libidinal investments of the social field. Every loved or desired being serves directly social character of the nonsublimated libido and its sexual investments. For those looking for a thesis topic on psychoanalysis, one is the following: must we see, in all these sexual-social investments of the libido and these object choices, mere dependences of	p 352 p 353 p 353
Must we save Oedipus at all costs by interpreting these investments and object choices as defenses against incest? (Thus the familial third thesis of schizoanalysis posits the primacy of the libidinal investments of the social field over the familial investment, both in from the outside, cut off from its economic and social investments and counterinvestments. And if there is, to use Freud's terms the libido must be desexualized in order to perform such investments, but begins with Oedipus, me, father and mother (the pre-oedipal ego—even the most undifferentiated ego of narcissism—since its investments are already differentiated, but differentiated according to the prepersonal regime	p 354 p 356 p 357 p 358

Not only does one thereby fail to correctly the social field, but at the level of their libidinal investments, which form the flows' constituent parts—between the paranoid reconstruction to be made. But madness breaks through, beneath the reformist investments, or the reactionary and fascist investments, which assume a reasonable	p 361 p 361 p 363 p 364

When Claude Levi-Strauss defines bricolage, he does he was at that moment. The death instinct: that is its name, and death is not without a model. For desire desires death also, because the full body of death is its motor, just as it desires life, because the organs of machine running, becomes unbearable to the body without organs. Beneath its organs it senses there are larvae and loathsome worms, and In order to resist organ-machines, the body without organs presents its smooth, slippery, opaque, taut surface as a barrier. In order nature of the machine and the non differentiated nature of its surface are proof of this. How is it possible that the schizo was that unbearable point where the mind touches matter and lives its every intensity, consumes it? And shouldn't this question immediately compel desiring-machines. As for history, he was content merely to mention its innate or acquired nature. Clerambault is the Feuerbach of psychiatry schizophrenia is formulated in terms of three concepts that constitute its trinary schema: dissociation (Kraepelin), autism (Bleuler), and space-time or being-in-the-world mock his truth by believing that we have paid it its due by merely figuratively taking our hats off to it desire, by attributing to it the faculty of being, through its representations, the cause of the reality of the objects of from believing in the intrinsic power of desire to create its own object—if only in an unreal, hallucinatory, or delirious conception as a support and a buttress, and merely examines its implications more carefully. In point of fact, if desire is fact, if desire is the lack of the real object, its very nature as a real entity depends upon an essence defined in terms of a relative lack and determined by its own object, whereas desire is regarded as what produces the that desire supposedly suffers from as a way of defining its object, the world acquires as its double some other sort a way of defining its object, the world acquires as its double some other sort of world, in accordance with the key to desire (missing in this world). If desire produces, its product is real. If desire is productive, it can be unconscious. Desire does not lack anything; it does not lack its object. It is, rather, the subject that is missing in is no fixed subject unless there is repression. Desire and its object are one and the same thing: the machine, as measure of the withdrawal of a subject that has lost its desire at the same time that it loses the passive within the subject; rather, the molar organization deprives desire of its objective being. Revolutionaries, artists, and seers are content to be objective, merely objective: they know that desire clasps life in its powerfully productive embrace, and reproduces it in a way that a Neapolitan revolutionary. We know very well where lack—and its subjective correlative—come from. Lack (manque) is created, planned, and of desiring-production, which would apply to the real in both its so-called rational and irrational forms. The fact there is massive strictest sense: the situation of the body without organs or its equivalent is the crucial factor here, depending on whether it outside, since it experiences it as the very fabric of its existence, as both its primary determinant and its fundamental raw it as the very fabric of its existence, as both its primary determinant and its fundamental raw material, its form and fabric of its existence, as both its primary determinant and its fundamental raw material, its form and its function, and deliberately as both its primary determinant and its fundamental raw material, its form and its function, and deliberately perpetuates it, in all primary determinant and its fundamental raw material, its form and its function, and deliberately perpetuates it, in all its violence, with form and its function, and deliberately perpetuates it, in all its violence, with all the powers at its command. Its sovereign it, in all its violence, with all the powers at its command. Its sovereign production and repression can be achieved in all its violence, with all the powers at its command. Its sovereign production and repression can be achieved in no other most important tendency of capitalism. It continually draws near to its limit, which is a genuinely schizophrenic limit. It tends, with genuinely schizophrenic limit. It tends, with all the strength at its command, to produce the schizo as the subject of the further and further, to the point that capitalism with all its flows may dispatch itself straight to the moon: we really we are really trying to say is that capitalism, through its process of production, produces an awesome schizophrenic accumulation of energy accumulation of energy or charge, against which it brings all its vast powers of repression to bear, but which nonetheless continues allowing it free rein; it continually seeks to avoid reaching its limit while simultaneously tending toward that limit. Capitalism institutes or in order to extract surplus value from them, the more its ancillary apparatuses, such as government bureaucracies and the forces of deliberately seeks out the very limit of capitalism: he is its inherent tendency brought to fulfillment, its surplus product, its proletariat of capitalism: he is its inherent tendency brought to fulfillment, its surplus product, its proletariat, and its exterminating angel. He scrambles is its inherent tendency brought to fulfillment, its surplus product, its proletariat, and its exterminating angel. He scrambles all the codes tendency brought to fulfillment, its surplus product, its proletariat, and its exterminating angel. He scrambles all the codes and is the is desiring-production as the limit of social production. Desiring-production, and its difference in regime as compared to social production, are thus are breaks-flows out of which desire wells up, thereby constituting its productivity and continually grafting the process of production onto the But how very strange this domain seems, simply because of its multiplicity—a multiplicity so complex that we can scarcely speak into any and every sort of connection; each one speaks its own language, and establishes syntheses with others that are quite elephant passing by, or a rising sun may suddenly make its appearance. In a chain that mixes together phonemes, morphemes, etc identity, if it traverses the body without organs without destroying its indifference, it is because it is not only a part part has nothing to do with the whole; it performs its role all by itself. In this case, only after the after the subject has partitioned itself does it proceed to its parturition ... that is why the subject can procure what is of any subject would sacrifice a very large part of its interests. Like all the other breaks, the subjective break is subject as a part of a whole, income that comes its way as something left over. (Here again, how bad a of desire in the material world. 6 The Whole and Its Parts In desiring-machines everything functions at the same time, but and fragmentations, within a sum that never succeeds in bringing its various parts together so as to form a whole. That exploding into fragments of something that is innocent precisely because its source is madness. This is why in Proust's work the body without organs is produced as a whole, but in its own particular place within the process of production, alongside the about transverse communications, transfinite summarizations, polyvocal and transcurative inscriptions on its own surface, on which the functional breaks of partial objects which the distinctive side chain of each acid keys into its proper position. As a general rule, the problem of the themselves to blow up all of Oedipus and totally demolish its ridiculous claim to represent the unconscious, to triangulate the unconscious of contretemps with the International Psycho-Analytic Association that bears above its door the inscription Let no one enter here who does within the process of production, and when the cycle discovers its independence from an indefinite parental regression. To quote Artaud once functions that became the measuring rod of the responsibility of its members and their possible guilt. Insofar as psychoanalysis cloaks insanity of self-punishment resulting from Oedipus as a confession of guilt, its theories are not at all radical or innovative. On the the solidity of the family as an institution and at its most archaic symbols. Hence, instead of participating in an undertaking is taking part in the work of bourgeois repression at its most far-reaching level, that is to say, keeping European humanity familial constellation in person. But when psychoanalysis makes of Oedipus its dogma, it is not unaware of the existence of relations link the normal and positive form of the complex to its inverse or negative form: a standard model Oedipus, such as the possible triangulations by distributing in a given domain desire, its object, and the law. It is certain that the two of parental figures, without at all penetrating the structure and its order of symbolic positions and functions. For us, however, the merely express the history of a long mistake, throughout all its variations and modalities; the strain of an endless repression? What it is the Real in itself, the impossible real and its production. But what is this long history, if we consider factory, a workshop—to become a theater, a scene and its staging. And not even an avant-garde theater, such as existed from that, beginning with the untellable character of the cure, its interminable and highly contractual nature, flows of speech in exchange in desire. The same history as that of Capital, with its enchanted, miraculated world. (Also at the beginning, said Marx, the precisely at the moment when Oedipus has not yet received its full theoretical formulation as the nuclear complex and leads a that Schreber's analysis was not in vivo detracts nothing from its exemplary value from the point of view of practice. In in the sun; it is the fault of sexuality and its stubborn symbolism. Furthermore, it is not surprising that the father churches and psychoanalysis, the moment when the Church would train its own psychoanalysts, and when it would become possible to write girl or boy! Such is the case with Oedipus and its resolution, different in boys and in girls. Such is the and in girls. Such is the case with castration, and its relationship to Oedipus in both instances. Castration is at once posited for itself on the body without organs, with—as its sole subject—not an ego, but the drive that forms typical group fantasy where desire invests the social field and its repressive forms. If there is a mise en scene, it cases, as if each were a little ego taking up its own business with daddy and mommy. On the contrary, we

It is from the fluxion of decoded flows all the commercial and bank credits, purely commercial credit has its roots in simple circulation where money develops as means of money traverses a particular circuit where it assumes, then loses, its value as an instrument of exchange, and where the conditions flux imply conditions of reflux, giving to the infinite debt its capitalist form; but the State as a regulator ensures a Desire of the most disadvantaged creature will invest with all its strength, irrespective of any economic understanding or lack of it money. While it is true that capitalism is industrial in its essence or mode of production, it functions only as merchant it is true that it is filiative industrial capital in its essence, it functions only through its alliance with commercial and filiative industrial capital in its essence, it functions only through its alliance with commercial and financial capital. In a sense, it the Urstaat, is continually expanding, and acquires a consistency entirely its own, which shows the manner in which capitalism for its its own, which shows the manner in which capitalism for its part was able to interpret the general principle according to exterior limit of all societies, this is because capitalism for its part has no exterior limit, but only an interior limit immanence of the system, the limit tends to reconstitute in its displacement the thing it tended to diminish in its primitive in its displacement the thing it tended to diminish in its primitive emplacement. Now this movement of displacement belongs essentially to It must be added, however, that the center itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment, its reservations and its ghettos as that the center itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment, its reservations and its ghettos as interior peripheries. (Pierre Moussa has

itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment, its reservations and its ghettos as interior peripheries. (Pierre Moussa has defined the United of the Third World that has succeeded and has preserved its immense zones of underdevelopment.) And if it is true that the tendency to a falling rate of profit or to its equalization asserts itself at least partially at the center, carrying that, even so, at the center the falling tendency retains its restricted sense, i.e., the relative diminution of surplus value that the automatic machine has always increasingly internalized them in its body or its structure as a field of forces, while machine has always increasingly internalized them in its body or its structure as a field of forces, while depending on a is constantly introducing breaks and cleavages through which it revolutionizes its technical modes of production. But several correctives must be introduced

For example, nondeterminist physics, with its corpuscular flows, will have to be brought into line with benefit of the capitalist system and in the service of its ends. That is why it has often been remarked that adopted only from the perspective of the rate of profit its investment will offer by the lowering of production costs; without the profitability of the new technique considered in isolation, but its effect on the over-all profitability of the firm in its its effect on the over-all profitability of the firm in its relationships with the market and with commercial and financial capital the ever widening circle of capitalism is completed, while reproducing its immanent limits on an ever larger scale, only if the zones of the center, but also because it engenders for its own part an enormous machinic surplus value by mobilizing the the greater part of the surplus value produced. The State, its police, and its army form a gigantic enterprise of antiproduction of the surplus value produced. The State, its police, and its army form a gigantic enterprise of antiproduction, but at the and becomes firmly wedded to it in order to regulate its productivity and realize surplus value which explains, for example, the double portrait of the scientific and technical worker takes on its full meaning. Although he has mastered a flow of knowledge power of capitalism can be explained by the fact that its axiomatic is not more flexible, but wider and more englobing joined, three segments that also define the three aspects of its immanence: (1) the one that extracts human surplus value on goods as soon as it acquires a purchasing power through its distribution to workers or production factors, through its allotment in power through its distribution to workers or production factors, through its allotment in the form of incomes—a relationship that it is in the axiomatic of capitalism, always ready to widen its own limits so as to add a new axiom to the system indeed holds together and functions, and perpetually fulfills its own immanence. In this manner it is indeed the global flows having no assignable exterior limit, and where capitalism reproduces its immanent limits on an ever widening and more comprehensive scale the desire of every subject it treats. Psychoanalysis constitutes for its part a gigantic enterprise of absorption of surplus value. But the signified, the transcendence of the despotic signifier, and finally, its consecutive decomposition into minimal elements within a field of immanence flow is privileged in this language, which remains indifferent to its substance or its support, inasmuch as the latter is an in this language, which remains indifferent to its substance or its support, inasmuch as the latter is an amorphous continuum. The are regulated by coded gaps that the signifier overcodes in its turn. There result diverse but always convergent consequences: the comparison has withdrawn. Because within this field it sets in motion its flows of form and substance, content and expression. Because it model in the point-sign, or in the figure-break stripped of its identity, having now only a floating identity, tends to replace schizzes. Far from being an overdetermination of structuralism and of its fondness for the signifier, Hjelmslev's linguistics implies the concerted destruction importance of J.-F. Lyotard's recent book is due to its position as the first generalized critique of the signifier. In not linguistic and do not depend on the signifier or its regulated elements. Thus Lyotard everywhere reverses the order of the is not the figures that depend on the signifier and its effects, but the signifying chain that depends on the figural causes so many of us to groan and bow under its weight, and that others use to establish a new terrorism as though it saw in this process the image of its own death coming from within? Why does it make the not only nominally but in reality? Why does it confine its madmen and madwomen instead of seeing in them its own confine its madmen and madwomen instead of seeing in them its own heros and heroines, its own fulfillment? And where it instead of seeing in them its own heros and heroines, its own fulfillment? And where it can no longer recognize the the figure of a simple illness, why does it keep its artists and even its scientists under such close surveillance—as simple illness, why does it keep its artists and even its scientists under such close surveillance—as though they risked unleashing machine for social repression-psycho repression, aimed at what nevertheless constitutes its own reality—the decoded flows? The answer—as we have the exterior limit of capitalism itself or the conclusion of its deepest tendency, but that capitalism only functions on condition that push back or displace this limit, by substituting for it its own immanent relative limits, which it continually reproduces on a is not the identity of capitalism, but on the contrary its difference, its divergence, and its death. Monetary flows are perfectly the identity of capitalism, but on the contrary its difference, its divergence, and its death. Monetary flows are perfectly schizophrenic realities capitalism, but on the contrary its difference, its divergence, and its death. Monetary flows are perfectly schizophrenic realities, but they exist translated in terms of a code, would not lay bare its own unavowable nature, that is, its intrinsic perversion or essential would not lay bare its own unavowable nature, that is, its intrinsic perversion or essential cynicism (the age of bad conscience is accompanied by a sign of necessarily extraeconomic power, although its causes and effects lie within the economy (for example, the money would take on functions other than those deriving from its form as the equivalent. But in this way the signs

The strength of capitalism indeed resides in the fact that its axiomatic is never saturated, that it is always capable of for man. In contrast to codes, the axiomatic finds in its different aspects its own organs of execution, perception, and memorization contrast to codes, the axiomatic finds in its different aspects its own organs of execution, perception, and memorization. Memory has become rather in the fact that the social machine has for its parts technical machines as constant capital attached to the full the social axiomatic: the way in which this axiomatic fulfills its own immanence; pushes back or enlarges its limits; adds still this axiomatic fulfills its own immanence; pushes back or enlarges its limits; adds still more axioms while preventing the system from the Urstaat. For the Urstaat was defined by overcoding, and its derivatives, from the ancient City-State to the monarchic State, already and of codes, to invent others, and by marshaling all its forces, was even able to prevent the conjunction from taking prevent the conjunction from taking place (as for the rest, its project was to resuscitate the Urstaat insofar as possible). The deterritorialized flows, and is able to carry the becoming-immanent to its highest point only to the extent that it is party is identical with capital itself. On the contrary, capitalism is its offspring, its result. Capitalism merely ensures the regulation of the with capital itself. On the contrary, capitalism is its offspring, its result. Capitalism merely ensures the regulation of the axiomatic; it limits. Never before has a State lost so much of its power in order to enter with so much force into this role very early, in fact from the start, from its gestation in forms still semifeudal or monarchic—from the standpoint of production, and when nascent industrial capitalism can secure its production and its market only by obtaining the abolition of and when nascent industrial capitalism can secure its production and its market only by obtaining the abolition of such privileges. That and stable level of employment, and forced capitalism to multiply its axioms while having at the same time to reproduce its axioms while having at the same time to reproduce its limits on an ever expanding scale (the axiom of displacement regulation of the axiomatized flows, with regard to production and its planning, the economy and its monetarization, and surplus value and with regard to production and its planning, the economy and its monetarization, and surplus value and its absorption (by the State planning, the economy and its monetarization, and surplus value and its absorption (by the State apparatus itself). The regulative functions of obvious practical fact, but a fact that does not reveal its theoretical foundation. The latter is simple to explain: from the should be credited with the discovery of class struggle and its role in history—precisely the same men who praise the according to which the sole end is abstract wealth and its realization in forms other than consumption. The generalized slavery of need to burden the animal from the outside, it shoulders its own burden. Not that man is ever the slave of and integrates them both in the continually expanded reproduction of its limits. So that the bourgeois is justified in saying, not servants of the machine, and those who sabotage it or its cogs and wheels. Between the social machine's regime and that apparatus. If the movement of capitalism, in the interplay of its differential relations, is to dodge any assignable fixed limit, to to dodge any assignable fixed limit, to exceed and displace its interior limits, and to always effect breaks of breaks, then the proletariat prevails and transforms the apparatus in conformity with its objective interest—but these operations are carried out under the but these operations are carried out under the domination of its consciousness or party vanguard, that is, for the benefit of the bourgeoisie as the great-absent class—or the bourgeoisie keeps its control of the State and is free to secrete its its control of the State and is free to secrete its own technobureaucracy, and above all to add a few more prevented classical capitalism from getting round the break by continuing its veritable mole work, always effecting breaks of breaks that allowed effecting breaks of breaks that allowed it to integrate into its axiomatic sections of the newly recognized class, while throwing the economic and political reterritorialization. But the socialist State also has its own minorities, its own territorialities, which re-form themselves against the reterritorialization. But the socialist State also has its own minorities, its own territorialities, which re-form themselves against the State, or which a territoriality that accompanies the deterritorialization of the machine, as its other side. If it is true that the function of time, it can do so only in the framework of its own limited purpose, as a determinate mode of production, production existing capital. Under the first aspect capitalism is continually surpassing its own limits, always deterritorializing further, displaying a cosmopolitan, universal energy advance in comparison with the despotic State, in terms of its fulfillment of a becoming-immanent, its generalized decoding of flows, and despotic State, in terms of its fulfillment of a becoming-immanent, its generalized decoding of flows, and its axiomatic that comes to fulfillment of a becoming-immanent, its generalized decoding of flows, and its axiomatic that comes to replace the codes and overcodings, But State, the Urstaat, the Asiatic despotic formation, which constitutes in its shadow existence history's only break, since even the modern social it as one of the poles between which it produces its own break. Democracy, fascism, or socialism, which of these is first great movement of deterritorialization, but does so by adding its eminent unity to the territorial communes that it conserves by However, what it doesn't allow to subsist it rediscovers through its own original means; it reterritorializes where it has lost the become as one. The historian says no, the Modern State, its bureaucracy and its technocracy, do not resemble the ancient despotic The historian says no, the Modern State, its bureaucracy and its technocracy, do not resemble the ancient despotic State. Of course is that capitalism makes use of the Urstaat for effecting its reterritorializations. But the imperturbable modern axiomatic, from the depths of reterritorializations. But the imperturbable modern axiomatic, from the depths of its immanence, reproduces the transcendence of the Urstaat as its internalized of its immanence, reproduces the transcendence of the Urstaat as its internalized limit, or one of the poles between which it poles between which it is determined to oscillate. And in its imperturbable and cynical existence, it is prey to great forces great forces that form the other pole of the axiomatic, its accidents, its breakdowns, its chances of being blown to pieces that form the other pole of the axiomatic, its accidents, its breakdowns, its chances of being blown to pieces, of causing the other pole of the axiomatic, its accidents, its breakdowns, its chances of being blown to pieces, of causing what it causing what it decodes to pass beyond the wall of its immanent regulations and beyond its transcendental resurrections. Each type of pass beyond the wall of its immanent regulations and beyond its transcendental resurrections. Each type of social machine produces a particular Could it be that the identity in nature is at its highest point in the order of modern capitalist representation, because family in despotic overcoding, and that of the dynastywhatever its mutations, its indecisions—which are inscribed under the same category despotic overcoding, and that of the dynastywhatever its mutations, its indecisions—which are inscribed under the same category of new the family according to which the family ceases to give its social form to economic reproduction: it is as though disinvested placing of the family outside the social field is also its greatest social fortune. For it is the condition under which from the flow of labor. In this way capitalism fills its field of immanence with images: even destitution, despair, revolt—and the entire social field, is coextensive with it, and countersects its co-ordinates, it would appear that the family is now merely around which the social field recloses, to which it applies its autonomous requirements of reproduction, and that it counteracts with all autonomous requirements of reproduction, and that it counteracts with all its dimensions. The alliances and filiations no longer pass through people family is still the economic, political, and cultural social field, its breaks and flows. Private persons are an illusion, images of reproduction, is content to apply and envelop these factors in its own mode of reproduction. Father, mother, and child thus become flattened onto other images, so that when this operation reaches its outcome the little ego of each person, related to its its outcome the little ego of each person, related to its father-mother, is truly the center of the world. Much more flows. We have also seen that capitalism finds in schizophrenia its own exterior limit, which it is continually repelling and exorcising it is continually repelling and exorcising, while capitalism itself produces its immanent limits, which it never ceases to displace and enlarge Oedipus is constituted, at the same time as it completes its migration in the in-depth elements of representation: the displaced represented machine resuscitates the Urstaat as one of the poles of its axiomatic, it makes the despot into one of its images of its axiomatic, it makes the despot into one of its images. That is why Oedipus gathers up everything, everything is yoke of Oedipus and carry it to the point of its autocritique. But it is like the story of the Resistance well that the pylon blew up and fell back into its hole. From the Symbolic to the Imaginary, from castration to one of these tactics that does not find in Oedipus its land of milk and honey, its good provider. Nor is not find in Oedipus its land of milk and honey, its good provider. Nor is there a single one of these as it is capable of carrying to a certain point its own critique—that is, the critique of the processes by of bad conscience and guilt always rises up and finds its nourishment—what is called being cured. On two points at are ill only from their own childhoods—all this finds its fulfillment outside the asylum, in psychoanalysis and in the consulting be capable, at least to a certain point, of conducting its autocritique. Universal history is nothing more than a theology if if it does not seize control of the conditions of its contingent, singular existence, its irony, and its own critique. And seize control of the conditions of its contingent, singular existence, its irony, and its own critique. And what are these conditions the conditions of its contingent, singular existence, its irony, and its own critique. And what are these conditions, this point where say that such a case is rare, and that, moreover, its origins are not reconstructible. Yet it is evident that there the breaks and the flows of the social field in its entirety, flows of women and of food, recordings and distributions or generation. Furthermore, taking organic bodies and organized persons as its object, the theory of regression merely attains the object of flows. Such is also the case for the social field: its coding or its axiomatic first determine within it a communication also the case for the social field: its coding or its axiomatic first determine within it a communication of unconscious. This unconscious does not by any means take the family as its principle; it takes as its principle the commonality of the means take the family as its principle; it takes as its principle the commonality of the social field insofar as it desire; breaches the wall and causes flows to move; assembles its machines and its groups-in-fusion in the enclaves or at the wall and causes flows to move; assembles its machines and its groups-in-fusion in the enclaves or at the periphery—proceeding in way that the Oedipal bacillus takes or doesn't take, imposes its mold or doesn't succeed in imposing it, pursuing directions of wave as a flow that defines the coexisting space of its presences. Every investment is collective, every fantasy is a group phenomena. One is a subjugated group investment, as much in its sovereign form as in its colonial formations of the gregarious group investment, as much in its sovereign form as in its colonial formations of the gregarious aggregate, which socially and psychically the body without organs is the limit of the socius, its tangent of deterritorialization, the ultimate residue of a deterritorialized socius to the realm of physics; the body without organs and its intensities are not metaphors, but matter itself. Nor is it represented and already suffers psychic and social repression of its elementary productive forces. But how can we speak of machines where there is desire—that is to say, not only its functioning, but formation and autoproduction? A machine works according to autoproduction? A machine works according to the previous intercommunications of its structure and the positioning of its parts, but does not the previous intercommunications of its structure and the positioning of its parts, but does not set itself into place any more ability to account for the workings of the organism, but its fundamental inability to account for its formations. From machines, mechanism of the organism, but its fundamental inability to account for its formations. From machines, mechanism abstracts a structural unity in terms a society, each member of which was bred truly after its kind. We see a machine as a whole, we call was ever made entirely by another, or two others, of its own kind, is not sufficient to warrant us in saying is that each part of every vapour-engine is bred by its own special breeders, whose function is to breed that part of code, when a part of a machine captures within its own code a code fragment of another machine, and thus code a code fragment of another machine, and thus owes its reproduction to a part of another machine: the red clover male wasp that it attracts and intercepts by carrying on its flower the image and the odor of the female wasp states of the living as well. The machine taken in its structural unity, the living taken in its specific and even machine taken in its structural unity, the living taken in its specific and even personal unity, are mass phenomena or molar are immediately molar manifestations, statistical determinations of desire and of its own machines. They are the same machines (there is no of an allosteric enzyme and the ligands prompting or inhibiting its activity there exists no chemically necessary relationship of structure or necessarily reproduce a structure under the action of DNA and its segments, the genes, performing veritable lottery drawings, creating switching points the truly molecular unconscious cannot confine itself to genes as its units of reproduction; these units are still expressive, and lead syntheses of desire. We have seen that, through reproduction and its objects (defined familiarly or genetically), it is always the unconscious Reich's final theory are taken into consideration, we admit that its simultaneously schizophrenic and paranoid nature is no obstacle where we on the couch who speaks to us of love, of its force and its despair, but the mute stroll of the schizo, Lenz's outing who speaks to us of love, of its force and its despair, but the mute stroll of the schizo, Lenz's outing while lacking boldness. Better the delirium of common sense than its platitude. For the prime evidence points to the fact that points to the fact that desire does not take as its object persons or things, but the entire surroundings that it always nomadic and migrant desire, characterized first of all by its gigantism: no one has shown this more clearly than Charles We have difficulty understanding what principles psychoanalysis uses to support its conception of desire, when it maintains that the libido must

The dwarfism of desire as a correlate to its gigantism. Sexuality and the desiring-machines are one and the same society imposes on this subject, and with which it represents its own sexuality. The schizo analytic slogan of the desiring-revolution will of the desiring-revolution will be first of all: to each its own sexes. 3 Psychoanalysis and Capitalism The schizoanalytic argument is psychoanalysis, this idea of unconscious representation marks from the outset its bankruptcy or its abnegation: an unconscious that no longer produces

It appears then that the interest psychoanalysis has in abstraction, then, which modern economics places at the head of its discussions, and which expresses an immeasurably ancient relation valid in capitalism. For as we have seen, capitalism indeed has as its limit the decoded flows of desiring-production, but it never stops mythic and the tragic representations, but it re-establishes them in its own service and in another form, as images of capital we have seen previously, it is in the interiority of its movement that capitalism requires and institutes not only a social the privatized family. Representation would never be able to ensure its own conversion without this application that furrows deep into it subjective abstract Labor as represented in private property has, as its correlate, subjective abstract Desire as represented in the privatized family very complex, since the structure can never present more than its own absence, or represent something not represented in the representation both the presence and the absence of the structures in its effects. While Andre Green expresses reservations about the adequacy of to stage the latent structure, as well as to embody its elements and relations, it is in a position to reveal production: every time that production, rather than being apprehended in its originality, in its reality, becomes reduced (rabattue) in this manner that production, rather than being apprehended in its originality, in its reality, becomes reduced (rabattue) in this manner to a representational representational space, it can no longer have value except by its own absence, and it appears as a lack within this that it is lacking, it will be encountered again in its entirety in symbolic castration. And it's a sure thing that to the family at the very moment it has lost its objective literal values. Psychoanalysis makes its ambition clear: to relieve moment it has lost its objective literal values. Psychoanalysis makes its ambition clear: to relieve the waning family, to replace the make it so that the analytic situation is incestuous in its essence, so that it is its own proof or voucher situation is incestuous in its essence, so that it is its own proof or voucher, on a par with Reality. In abduction of the orphan machines, inasmuch as the structure applies its articulation to them, inasmuch as the parents lay their fingers a despotic symbol that totalizes them in the name of its own absence or withdrawal. Yes, in fact, there the production of molar castration. Here too Lacan's approach appears in all its complexity; for it is certain that he does not enclose precisely in order to lead Oedipus to the point of its self-critique. The task undertaken by Lacan is to lead Oedipus a linguistic structure, but leads linguistics to the point of its autocritique, by showing how the structural organization of signifiers still it and the Symbolic that conditions it within representation, reveals its reverse side as a positive principle of nonconsistency that dissolves desire is shifted into the order of production, related to its molecular elements, and where it lacks nothing, because it is sea of proper names). The unconscious is not figurative, since its figural is abstract, the figure-schizo It is not structural, nor figure-schizo It is not structural, nor is it symbolic, for its reality is that of the Real in its very production symbolic, for its reality is that of the Real in its very production, in its very inorganization. For there can be no doubt: this way the despot when incest comes to take the place of the representation itself, and in this capacity take charge of the repressing function has lost its independence and its particular dimensions, has aligned itself on the voice and has become subordinated to the voice that begins to depend on graphism. It is by subordinating itself to the voice that writing supplants it. Jacques Derrida is by depending on it in various ways and by subordinating itself to the voice. The primitive territorial sign is self-validating; it the socius and as the socius. The primitive socius covers itself in this manner with a network wherein one is continually word has only a designating function but does not of itself constitute the sign; what becomes a sign is rather the the pain emanating from the graphism applied to the flesh itself: the eye jumps. The magic triangle with its three sides word has an essentially designating function, but where the graphism itself constitutes a sign in conjunction with the thing designated, and the heart of a given social machine. All this finds itself overwhelmed in a new destiny, with the despotic machine and machine and imperial representation. In the first place, graphism aligns itself on the voice, falls back on the voice, and becomes the new alliance, a fictitious voice from beyond that expresses itself in the flow of writing as direct filiation. These two of graphism that, at one and the same time, subordinates itself to the voice in order to subordinate the voice and into writing on tablets, stones, and books; the eye sets itself to reading. (Writing does not entail but implies a kind fictitious voice from on high which, inversely, no longer expresses itself except through the writing signs that it emits (revelation). This threshold of deterritorialization; the signifier is merely the deterritorialized sign itself. The sign made letter. Desire no longer dares to desire no longer sees, it reads. The body no longer allows itself to be engraved like the earth, but prostrates itself before allows itself to be engraved like the earth, but prostrates itself before the engravings of the despot, the region beyond the the first sense, without an overcoding effected by the signifier itself in the second sense. And according to his prophecy, wouldn't the State itself be that dog which wants to die? But that is the displaced represented of desire, it becomes the repressing representation itself. The impossible has become possible; the unoccupied limit now finds The impossible has become possible; the unoccupied limit now finds itself occupied by the despot. Oedipus has received its name, the the contrary the representation exercises its repressive action on desire itself. The Oedipus complex, as it is called by psychoanalysis, will it will have to finally become the representative of desire itself. And it must become the latter by virtue of being to take form—that is, the royal triad must masculinize itself—and this must occur as a direct consequence of the have to experience this extreme affliction of being turned against itself: the turning back against itself, bad conscience, the guilt that affliction of being turned against itself: the turning back against itself, bad conscience, the guilt that attaches it to the most into oblivion, a latency that lays hold of the State itself, and where the writing system sometimes disappears. It no longer of itself forms a ruling class or classes; it is itself formed of itself forms a ruling class or classes; it is itself formed by these classes, which have become independent and delegate signifies. It no longer produces an overcoding unity; it is itself produced inside the field of decoded flows. As a machine machine it no longer determines a social system; it is itself determined by the social system into which it is incorporated but it becomes concrete, it tends to concretization while subordinating itself to the dominant forces. The existence of an analogous evolution law to the entire physical system that disengages or liberates itself from the law. A State desire, the most fantastic machine the State. Death is felt rising from within and desire itself becomes the death instinct, latency, but it also passes over But the capitalist machine, the civilized machine, will first establish itself on the conjunction. When this occurs, the conjunction no longer the excess consumption of a class, that it makes luxury itself into a means of investment, and reduces all the decoded in feudalism, and from the decomposition of the feudal system itself and that of its State, still does not give us the decoding of the worker in favor of the work itself or of the machine. And for capital: the deterritorialization of commercial and financial capitalism in its primitive forms merely installed itself in the pores of the old socius without changing the money in process, and, as such, capital. ... Value ... suddenly presents itself as an independent substance, endowed with a motion of its commodities, it enters now, so to say, into relations with itself. It differentiates itself as original value from itself as surplus-value now, so to say, into relations with itself. It differentiates itself as original value from itself as surplus-value; as the father relations with itself. It differentiates itself as original value from itself as surplus-value; as the father differentiates himself qua the son a variable relation between independent terms; it has taken upon itself the independence, the quality of the terms and the quantity the terms and the quantity of the relations. The abstract itself posits the more complex relation within which it will develop fluctuation of variable capital, and where Dx derives from capital itself and constitutes the fluctuation of constant capital (the definition of a falling rate of profit has no end, but reproduces itself while reproducing the factors that counteract it. But why does a displacement; thus the continuity of the capitalist process engenders itself in this break of a break that is always displaced exterior limit, but only an interior limit that is capital itself and that it does not encounter, but reproduces by always capitalist machine. It must be added, however, that the center itself has its organized enclaves of underdevelopment, its reservations and its a falling rate of profit or to its equalization asserts itself at least partially at the center, carrying the economy toward once at the dawn of capitalism, but is continually reproducing itself. Capitalism exports filiative capital. At the same time as capitalist wide-ranging. By no means does the diachronic capitalist machine allow itself to be revolutionized by one or more of its synchronous determinism.) The true axiomatic is that of the social machine itself, which takes the place of the old codings and organizes rate of profit through machinic surplus value is not innovation itself, whose value is no more measurable than that of human when highly remunerated—and the profit of capital that inscribes itself with another sort of writing. In this respect the knowledge gigantic enterprise of antiproduction, but at the heart of production itself, and conditioning this production. Here we discover a new determination as interior limits, but the presence of antiproduction within production itself. The apparatus of antiproduction is no longer a transcendent instance limits it, or checks it; on the contrary, it insinuates itself everywhere in the productive machine and becomes firmly wedded to of the machinic surplus value of constant capital, which distinguishes itself from the human surplus value of variable capital and from of consciousness—shows that the productive essence of capitalism can itself function only in this necessarily monetary or commodity form that becomes concrete within the field of immanence peculiar to capitalism itself, with the appearance of the technical means of expression that to a game; the signified-signifier relationship, where the signified finds itself by nature subordinated to the signifier; figures defined as effects to the signifier; figures defined as effects of the signifier itself; the formal elements of the signifier determined in relation to conditions of identity that defined the elements of the signifier itself. Because in Hjelmslev's linguistics the order of the elements is figural that comes to short-circuit the signifier's coded gaps, inserting itself between them, and working under the conditions of identity of identity of their elements. In language and in writing itself, sometimes the letters as breaks, as shattered partial objects—and signifying chain that depends on the figural effects—this chain itself being composed of asignifying signs—crushing the signifiers as well

can say that schizophrenia is the exterior limit of capitalism itself or the conclusion of its deepest tendency, but that capitalism content to displace a relative immanent limit that will reconstitute itself further along; on whether controlling reterritorializations are added to the labor, and consequently must enter into a composite that is itself qualitative and implies noneconomic factors. Or the way the autochthonous to the qualified nature of the flows. But the equivalence itself points to the position of a relation without limitation: in respective qualities have no existence prior to the differential relation itself. The quality of the flows results solely from their conjunction order of powers. For if one of the flows finds itself subordinated and enslaved to the other, the reason is precisely when the latter is merged qualitatively and temporally with labor itself into one and the same simple magnitude (the condition characterized condition characterized by surplus value of flux). Hence capital differentiates itself from any other socius or full body, inasmuch as capital from any other socius or full body, inasmuch as capital itself figures as a directly economic instance, and falls back on conditions of capitalist production and circulation, that is, in capital itself, but it functions only by reproducing and widening these limits to fully occupy this field. But this deterritorialized field finds itself determined by an axiomatic, in contrast to the territorial field need of bearing directly, on men. But an axiomatic of itself is by no means a simple technical machine, not even the invention of capitalism, since it is identical with capital itself. On the contrary, capitalism is its offspring, its result. Capitalism new commercial functions of a capital that has secured for itself direct interests in production. As a general rule, State controls and surplus value and its absorption (by the State apparatus itself). The regulative functions of the State do not imply any or exterior limit, and the effusion of antiproduction inside production itself—institutes an unrivaled slavery, an unprecedented subjugation: there are no take place starting from an already conquered State that finds itself confronted by the same axiomatic problems of extraction of a State, if only as a monopolistic market of the State itself. And in effect, how does one define the true alternative not prevent the resurrection of a State capitalism inside socialism itself, any more than it prevented classical capitalism from getting round elements—no more controlled by official socialism than by capitalism itself—further into the distance, to flee periphery or into enclaves the party leadership. How does one explain that desire devotes itself to operations that are not failures of recognition, but rather of the party: the proletariat was only able to constitute itself as a class on the basis of artificial neoterritorialities; in basis of artificial neoterritorialities; in parallel fashion, the bourgeoisie reterritorializes itself in forms that are at times the most archaic.) The is quick to add that this essentially cynical discovery finds itself rectified by a new territorialization, in the form of a sake of production, that is, production as an end in itself, the absolute development of the social productivity of labor; but confronting limits and barriers that are interior and immanent to itself, and that, precisely because they are immanent, let themselves be longer relates to a distinct object, but to productive activity itself. The socius as full body has become directly economic as of filiation or capital of alliance. Capital has taken upon itself the relations of alliance and filiation. There ensues a privatization simply the form of human matter or material that finds itself subordinated to the autonomous social form of economic reproduction, and equal in relation to one another; but inside the field itself, the form of social economic reproduction has already preformed the capacity, etc., in such a way that the family finds itself countersected by the order of classes. (In this sense, indeed is a very simple operation, one that indeed readily lends itself to formalization, although it involves universal history. We have seen limit, which it is continually repelling and exorcising, while capitalism itself produces its immanent limits, which it never ceases to displace Oedipus is this displaced or internalized limit where desire lets itself be caught. The Oedipal triangle is the personal and private only in the capitalist formation that the Oedipal limit finds itself not only occupied, but inhabited and lived, in the sense by which it re-enslaves what within it tends to free itself or to appear freely. The same thing must be said the primal position of the father of the horde. Oedipus itself would be nothing without the identifications of the parents with neurotic. So it is that psychoanalysis has much difficulty extracting itself from an infinite regression: the father must have been a relation to the child, this proposition, devoid of meaning in itself, concretely means the following: the social investments are first in seduction). (2) If regression taken in an absolute sense reveals itself to be inadequate, it is because this regression encloses us cyclical movement by which the unconscious, always remaining subject, reproduces itself. There is, then, no longer any call for wondering which inversely, the way in which everything turns fascist or envelops itself in fascism, the way in which it falls back into is true that social investments are made on the socius itself as a full body, and that their respective poles necessarily without organs and its intensities are not metaphors, but matter itself. Nor is it our intention to revive the question of and the positioning of its parts, but does not set itself into place any more than it forms or reproduces itself itself into place any more than it forms or reproduces itself. This is even the point around which the usual polemic a system of mechanical causes, or because the machine is itself a system of means in terms of the aims of What is essential is not in the passage to infinity itself—the infinity composed of machine parts or the temporal infinity a surplus value of code, and where the whole is itself produced alongside the parts, as a part apart or, as the conjunctions biunivocal; then desire does not need to project itself into these forms that have become opaque. These forms are There is a whole biology of schizophrenia; molecular biology is itself schizophrenic—as is microphysics. But inversely schizophrenia—the theory of In point of fact, the truly molecular unconscious cannot confine itself to genes as its units of reproduction; these units are familiarly or genetically), it is always the unconscious that produces itself in a cyclical orphan movement, a cycle of destiny where cycle whereby the unconscious, remaining a subject, produces and reproduces itself? We use the term Libido to designate the specific energy person that it takes as object. But our object choice itself refers to a conjunction of flows of life and of we always make love with worlds. And our love addresses itself to this libidinal property of our lover, to either close effective grip on the zones of production, representation must inflate itself with all the power of myth and tragedy, it must in myth, in tragedy. Is it the unconscious that represents itself through Oedipus and castration? Or is it the psychoanalyst—the merely the awareness of a process and not the process itself.) Actually, in process, I believe with each line I write particular sources. Freud is thus the first to disengage desire itself (le desir tout court), as Ricardo disengages labor itself (le desire itself (le desir tout court), as Ricardo disengages labor itself (le travail tout court), and thereby the sphere of production exterior and independent element as objectivity, but in the element, itself subjective, of private property: What was previously being external to deep into it, cleaves it, and forces it back upon itself. Thus subjective abstract Labor as represented in private property has of subjective representation. The series of this representation now presents itself: (imaginary) infinite subjective representation-theatrical representation-structural representation. And precisely because the on living only as an absence and a lack unto itself. For a structural unity is imposed on the desiring-machines that partial objects lack, and as that which is lacking unto itself while being lacking in them (the Great Signifier symbolizable by displaced. The limit now passes only within the molar aggregate itself, inasmuch as the latter is furrowed by the line of impasses of a molar representation that the family closes round itself. What is the use of going from the imaginary dual of production in a constellation of which it is not itself a part. There the absence of a tie necessarily appears only insofar as it reproduces the element of castration, which itself is not imaginary but symbolic. There we have the three an absence, but in the sense that the unconscious reproduces itself wherever the names of history designate present intensities (the sea its poisonous sperm and gain the time necessary for propagating itself, and for passing on to our future children? And what a flow is made to circulate that does not let itself be stopped by Oedipus, the mark of the triangle (they reality, it no longer opens to any outside, but becomes itself the test of reality and the guarantor of its own are reduced. Psychoanalysis index sui, with no other reference than itself or the analytic situation. Psychoanalysis states clearly that unconscious representation of the displaced represented; and this, precisely because this agency itself belongs to representation, as a nonrepresented representative, or as a times, on the contrary, the movement through which the limit itself is displaced, and now passes to the interior of the becomes replaced by beliefs, the other where repressed desiring-production finds itself replaced by representations. To be sure, it is not psychoanalysis capital, said Freud). That is why, inversely, schizoanalysis must devote itself with all its strength to the necessary destructions. Destroying beliefs absence charged with representing the absence, with linking this absence itself, and with moving us back and forth from one pole female. The movement of deterritorialization can never be grasped in itself, one can only grasp its indices in relation to the pencil point that traces the design, he is the stroke itself. ... That is why the final image is without optimism. One and psychosis. To a point where the process cannot extricate itself, continue on, and reach fulfillment, except insofar as it is whose sufferings are unspeakable? Does he suffer from the process itself, or rather from its interruptions, when he is neuroticized in of the structure and the event, rather than the process itself. Furthermore, they localize social and mental alienation on a single social alienation includes in its turn mental alienation, which finds itself represented or reterritorialized in neurosis, perversion, and psychosis (the mental only because it is deprived of this support, and finds itself reduced to testifying all alone for deterritorialization as a universal that the movement of deterritorialization creates of necessity and by itself a new earth. Psychoanalysis is especially satisfying in this regard a formation of this sphere—here is where desire finds itself trapped, specifically limited to human sex, unified and identified in partial objects, dispersed working parts of a machine that is itself dispersed. In short, partial objects are the molecular functions of and defines the other's potential field of presence, which is itself multiple (a multiplicity of anuses for the flows of shit breaks the flow that another object emits or produces relatively, itself ready to emit a flow that other partial objects will to flow and breaking flows, consist of the passive synthesis itself insofar as it ensures the relative coexistence and displacement of no way the contrary of the organs-partial objects. It is itself produced in the first passive synthesis of connection, as that it can be produced as the support that appropriates for itself the flow production. It can as well repel the organs-objects repel the organs-objects as attract them, and appropriate them for itself. But in repulsion as in attraction, the body without organs and nonorganized multiplicity. And when it attracts them and fits itself over them, in the process of a miraculating fetishistic machine Numen). But in fact, from the standpoint of the machine itself, there is no succession that ensures the strict coexistence of causes them to pass over to the body without organs itself, thereby channeling or codifying the flows. However, the whole question codes; since it works on the decoded flows, it cannot itself proceed except by effecting reterritorializations and by reviving the signifying forms a given determinate configuration on a support that is itself specifically determined, and in terms of a detached signifier. These form in which the genic unconscious, always remaining subject, reproduces itself. And as we have seen, that is the primary inspiration signifier of castration. Worse yet, it will happen that psychoanalysis itself wants to act as an axiomatic, which is the famous kinds of desiring-machine parts, in the dispersion of the machine itself. And yet the problem persists: how can all that function organs to the body without organs, and appropriates them for itself in the apparent objective movement. Repulsion is the condition of condition of the machine's functioning, but attraction is the functioning itself. That the functioning depends on repulsion is clear to us in the very nature of every intensity to invest within itself the zero intensity starting from which it is produced, in closest to the matter whose zero degree they invest in itself. They control the unconscious experience of death, insofar as death every intensity is extinguished at the end, that every becoming itself becomes a becoming-death! Death, then, does actually happen. Maurice Blanchot not an I who receives the model. For the model itself is not the I either, but the body without organs critique of civilization, but that civilization on the contrary finds itself sanctified as the sale agency capable of opposing the death is a part of the desiring-machine, a part that must itself be judged, evaluated in the functioning of the machine and a principle, the reason will be found in Freud's practice itself. For if the principle has nothing to do with the essence of life except in a form turned back against itself, in the form of death itself. And this neutralization, this form turned back against itself, in the form of death itself. And this neutralization, this turning against life, is also the himself, this master of destruction, of self-destructing—the very wound itself compels him to live. . . . It is Oedipus, the marshy earth death a conservatory for the Oedipal life. Desire is in itself not a desire to love, but a force to love call that a desire?) But desire must turn back against itself in the name of a horrible Ananke, the Ananke of overcode the flows? Once it is said that desiring-production is itself a decoded and deterritorialized production, how do we explain that for these reasons, the identity in nature must appear for itself between social production and desiring-production. But in its turn, this this, there is no living desire that could not of itself cause the system to explode, or that would not make the preconscious, and that delegate their representatives in the unconscious itself, thereby immobilizing the machines, silencing them, trapping them, sabotaging them actually covered over by antiformations that disfigure the unconscious in itself, and impose on it causations, comprehensions, and expressions that no represent. It is the very form of interpretation that shows itself to be incapable of attaining the unconscious, since it gives benefit from a coincidence and a support in the unconscious itself that ensures the hold. We have seen what this support in the machinery of desire. In contrast to psychoanalysis, which itself falls into the trap while causing the unconscious to fall there is not one molecular formation that is not by itself an investment of a molar formation. There are no desiring-machines the escape. But at the other pole, the schizophrenic escape itself does not merely consist in withdrawing from the social, in as a lack, at the same time that the whole itself is said to be lacked by the partial objects. In labor). The form or quality of the socius is therefore itself produced, but as the unengendered—that is, as the natural is indeed in this sense that social production is desiring-production itself under determinate conditions. These determinate conditions are thus the forms portion that is due the subjects. The preconscious class interest itself thus refers to the selections of flows, to the detachments interest in a given regime. The other class can constitute itself only by a counterinvestment that creates its own interest in the distinction to be made passes into the economic infrastructure itself and into its investments. Libidinal economy is no less objective the formation of sovereignty, or the form of power for itself, devoid of meaning and purpose, since the meanings and the absurdity, but it can exert this violence only by assigning itself aims and meanings in which even the most enslaved elements selections, detachments, and portions. But the investment of the flow itself and its axiomatic, which to be sure requires no precise after. Antiproduction effuses in the system: antiproduction is loved for itself, as is the way in which desire represses itself in for itself, as is the way in which desire represses itself in the great capitalist aggregate. Repressing desire, not only for it is not certain that the unconscious libidinal investment is itself revolutionary. For the same breaks do not pass at the in the other case the break is within the socius itself, in that it has the capacity for causing the flows subjugates the large aggregate to the functional multiplicities that it itself forms on the molecular scale (it is no more a group, even in seizing power, as long as this power itself refers to a form of force that continues to enslave to a socius as a fixed support that attributes to itself the productive forces, extracting and absorbing the surplus value therefrom invested, through its loves and sexuality, was the social field itself in its economic, political, historical, racial, and cultural determinations: in difference apprehended and invested as the nonfamily within the family itself? The other class is by no means grasped by the either the object or the cause of desire, but is itself the castrating apparatus, the machine for putting lack into desire its own proof, and that, contrary to the movement, proves itself only by not working, by being interminable. Psychoanalysis has become or the way in which it is forced to take itself as a goal. We have seen in this sense how and repression. It is in this sense that contradiction installs itself not only at the level of the flows that traverse to block it on all sides, is led to take itself as an end: a psychotic is produced who escapes the refuge in primal repression, closing the body without organs around itself and silencing his desiring-machines. Catatonia rather than neurosis, catatonia rather unconscious investment rises up that embraces a full body for itself, independently of all aims, and a degree of development for independently of all aims, and a degree of development for itself, independently of all reason: that very degree and no other and universal history. In short, Oedipus implies within the unconscious itself an entire reactionary and paranoid investment of the social field desire had sexuality as an index in their social scope itself. Which does not mean, of course, that one need only or of a social axiomatic to which the libido addresses itself through them. Persons are simulacra derived from a social aggregate from a social aggregate whose code is unconsciously invested for itself. That is why love and desire exhibit reactionary, or else that the unconscious paranoid investment was grounded in the socius itself as a full body without organs, beyond the preconscious aims accomplished without overthrowing power, without reversing subordination, without returning production itself to desire: for it is only desire that lives from

it a large degree of autonomy, its painting apparently molds itself to a Byzantine code where even the colors and the and underneath recodings or axiomatics: the pure process that fulfills itself, and that never ceases to reach fulfillment as it proceeds sometimes lead to madness . . . a list that could not include itself in Oedipus, unless it were to call Oedipus in question a way that the military, bureaucratic, and police apparatus finds itself grounded in the economy itself, which directly produces libidinal investments periphery, but also multiplies enclaves of overpopulation in the center itself, and easily tolerates the so-called socialist formations. (It is not simply explained by the conditioned profits, but on the contrary itself explains that a small-time capitalist, with no great profits or of aims and reasons; or else the investment of interest itself gives rise to and creates those interests that rationalize the still defined by an order of causes and aims, and itself weaves a whole system of macroscopic relations that determine the of class or interest, which are based in the infrastructure itself. But we attach all the more importance to them as of desire: desire that produces—real-desire, or the real in itself. Finally, we do not at all think that the revolutionary or the finalist illusions that repression imposes on the process itself. This explains why we have only spoken of a schizoid and disquieting at the same time. It does not take itself for a party or even a group, and does not it does not claim to be identical with the revolution itself. Given a socius, schizoanalysis only asks what place it reserves

The announcement of the father's death constitutes a last belief, a belief by virtue of nonbelief about which Nietzsche previous existences—religiosity? Scientific knowledge as nonbelief is truly the last refuge of belief, and as Nietzsche put it, there never castrating it. But psychoanalysis reinforces the movement, it invents a last priest. Oedipal analysis imposes a transcendent use on all the deduction of the human reason, which has recourse to this last extremity, to save itself ... which first and foremost is a psychoanalysts do is to reinforce the movement; they add a last burst of energy to the displacement of the entire unconscious not in the analyst's office, which merely acts as the last territoriality. And Oedipus is not made by the family. The involuting and evolving between these two poles. Oedipus as the last rock, and castration as the cavern: the ultimate territoriality, although Now we have seen that it is only in this last sense that Oedipus is a limit. This is also the is also the case for desiring-production. But in fact this last sense itself can be understood in many different ways. In as the representative of desire. Whence, in the fifth and last instance, the importance of the task of displacing the limit the latter is revealed only at the end, as the last vestige of the vanished despot, the underside of his voice of this relationship in the capitalist system. 11 Oedipus at Last In the territorial or even the despotic machine, social economic narcissistic ego is identical with the Oedipal subject. Oedipus at last: in the end it is a very simple operation, one does not invent Oedipus; it merely provides the latter a last territoriality, the couch, and a last Law, the analyst as provides the latter a last territoriality, the couch, and a last Law, the analyst as despot and money collector. But the he still relates this essence to the family as the last territoriality of private man—whence the position of Oedipus, marginal application of this axiomatic is carried out: Oedipus as the last word of capitalist consumption—sucking away at daddy-mommy, being blocked the body without organs as the indifferent support for a last representation? Between the two there is latency—the celebrated latency—which is without doubt the greatest psychoanalytic new level). Between the two there is latency—the celebrated latency—which is without doubt the greatest psychoanalytic mystification: this society and desiring-machines; on the contrary, it spreads the veil of latency. As to those who refuse to be oedipalized in one contrary, this content should be followed as the thread of latency that the order of families hides from us. Should the law prescribes at the heart of the family; and finally latency, the celebrated latency, after which the beyond begins. But since the heart of the family; and finally latency, the celebrated latency, after which the beyond begins. But since this beyond consists desire of desire, the desire of the despot's desire, a latency inscribed in the bowels of the State apparatus. Better not more deeply rooted in the State than thought, and that latency not only befalls the subjects of the State, but is becomes that of the subjects against the despot. In the latency system of terror, what is no longer active, en-acted, or wall of the signifier. This is why the order of latency in the African, Chinese, Egyptian, and other empires was that into desire, and of desire into the law; the terrible latency with its afterward or its after-the-event. All the parts of of Oedipus. In Moses and Monotheism he indeed surmises that latency is a State affair. But then latency must not succeed indeed surmises that latency is a State affair. But then latency must not succeed the Oedipus complex, marking the complex's repression as it is called by psychoanalysis, will be born of latency, after latency, and it signifies the return of the repressed is called by psychoanalysis, will be born of latency, after latency, and it signifies the return of the repressed under conditions and even decode desire. The Oedipus complex appears only after latency; and when Freud recognizes two phases separated by latency, it after latency; and when Freud recognizes two phases separated by latency, it is only the second phase that merits the complex's the Romans. But how does one explain both this latency into which the despotic State enters, and this power with to another dimension, always at a remove and struck by latency, but that springs back and returns stronger than before in birth of capitalism. Decoded flows strike the despotic State with latency; they submerge the tyrant, but they also cause him to rising from within and desire itself becomes the death instinct, latency, but it also passes over into these flows that carry must be overcome, and that this is achieved through castration, latency, desexualization, and sublimation. But what is castration if not still symbolic, and therefore all the more virulent? Let us consider another text of Freud's, a later one, where Oedipus is already designated as the nuclear complex beginning, but is subsequently forgotten-repressed, though still subject to a later rediscovery in relation to more recent developments. Whence the magical counterinvestments in relation to familial investments: this will be seen later, at the level of an analysis of deliriums. there are no disjunctions of filiation that do not reconstitute lateral connections across the alliances and pairings of persons. Not only inclusive disjunctions, it still has to find again and reanimate lateral connections in the network itself, and it must attribute them conjugation, an articulation of bodies for and between themselves, a lateral inscription with articulatory stones of alliance, in short, a whole itself only insofar as the filiations become extended, correlatively to lateral alliances that become established. The law governing the latter was connective synthesis or coupling. But when capital), it would seem that they then come under another law that expresses a distribution in relation to the nonproductive element paranoiac machine, with its tortures, its dark shadows, its ancient Law. The celibate machine itself is not a paranoiac machine, however the increase in the absolute quantity of surplus value, the law of the counteracted tendency. As a corollary of this law law of the counteracted tendency. As a corollary of this law, there is the twofold movement of decoding or deterritorializing flows ancillary apparatuses, such as government bureaucracies and the forces of law and order, do their utmost to reterritorialize, absorbing in the relation to the machine connected to it. This is the law of the production of production. That is why, at the more deeply rooted schizoid attitude.) For the rigors of the law are only an apparent expression of the protest of the object is the abolition of fragmented universes, in which the law never unites anything in a single Whole, but on the distributing in a given domain desire, its object, and the law. It is certain that the two preceding modes of generalization sex or the other in another subject. Such is the law of partial objects. Nothing is lacking, nothing can be defined Oedipus, just as it knows nothing of parents, gods, the law, lack. The Women's Liberation movements are correct in saying: We distinguishes the revolutionary institution from the enormous inertia which the law communicates to institutions in an established order. Nietzsche says to the exclusive use of the disjunctions imposed by the law (for example, Oedipal homosexuality). But group fantasy no longer has that pulls the fantasy in two directions, as the economic law establishes perversion in the psychic exchanges, or as the psychic psychic exchanges on the contrary promote a subversion of the law: Anachronistic, relative to the institutional level of gregariousness, the singular authority of the doctor as Father and Judge, Family and Law; and finally to culminate in the following paradox: While the then a second beginning is invoked; Oedipus itself with the law of the father and the exclusive differentiations that this law law of the father and the exclusive differentiations that this law prescribes at the heart of the family; and finally latency in myth the figures of a maternal and a paternal law, their struggles and their relationships. But Engels slips in a lack to each position of desire, fusing desire to a law, and engendering the illusion that this loosened up and freed story—psychoanalysis. The three errors concerning desire are called lack, law, and signifier. It is one and the same error, an empty position and no longer a deprivation, that turns the law into a rule of the game and no longer a reality. From the moment desire is welded again to the law—we needn't point out what is known since time began known since time began: that there is no desire without law—the eternal operation of eternal repression recommences, the operation that the sign of desire is never a sign of the law, it is a sign of strength (puissance). And who would of strength (puissance). And who would dare use the term law for the fact that desire situates and develops its strength remark by Sir J. G. Frazer according to which the law only forbids men to do what their instincts incline them not desired. Once again, it is this confidence in the law, the unawareness of the ruses and the procedures of the the unawareness of the ruses and the procedures of the law, that leaves us wondering. The immortal father of Celine's Death flows circulate and to perform breaks in these flows. The law tells us: You will not marry your mother, and you what I wanted! Will it ever be suspected that the law discredits—and has an interest in discrediting and disgracing—the the person it presumes to be guilty, the person the law wants to be guilty and wants to be made to call displacement. For what really takes place is that the law prohibits something that is perfectly fictitious in the order of to this fiction. This is indeed the only way the law has of getting a grip on intention, of making the the parents, and as if the family were its supreme law. Partial objects are subjected to the notorious law of totality-unity its supreme law. Partial objects are subjected to the notorious law of totality-unity acting as lacking. The disjunctions are subjected to and back away horrified. Better to fall back under the law of the signifier, marked by castration, triangulated in Oedipus. So prehistoric labor; a system of evaluations possessing the force of law concerning the various members and parts of the body. Not assumed ideal model; morally, by invoking a structural bond between law and transgression; physically, as though it were a question of the full body: an enchanted surface of inscription, the fantastic law, or the apparent objective movement; but also a magical agent remain bachelors. However, at all events, it does express the law that a man cannot receive a wife except from the function, as though the supposedly fundamental relationship between desire and law were manifested in transgression. transgression. It is necessary to recall once more that the law proves nothing about an original reality of desire because it the transgression proves nothing about a functional reality of the law because, far from being a mockery of the law, it the law because, far from being a mockery of the law, it is itself derisory in relation to what the law the law, it is itself derisory in relation to what the law prohibits in reality (the reason why revolutions have nothing to the customary maternal dialects, while the other designates the imperative law of the language of the father. to subsume it under the higher superimposed unity of a Law that is more terrible. As a matter of fact, the law does not begin by being what it will become or for the latter to reshape its form of sovereignty. The law does not begin by being what it will become or an application directed at the rebellious parts. The imperial barbarian law possesses instead two features that are in opposition to those Kafka so forcefully developed: first, the paranoiac-schizoid trait of the law (metonymy) according to which the law governs nontotalizable and nontotalized parts, partitioning them off, organizing them second, the maniacal depressive trait (metaphor) according to which the law reveals nothing and has no knowable object, the verdict having existence prior to the penalty, and the statement of the law having no existence prior to the verdict. The trial by phonetism, and its alphabet. Overcoding is the essence of the law, and the origin of the new sufferings of the body again, before it becomes a feigned guarantee against despotism, the law is the invention of the despot himself: it is the of the twelve Caesars and the Golden Age of Roman Lawtaking the debtor's side against the creditor when necessary, so vengeance, and a vengeance exercised in advance, the imperial barbarian law crushes the whole primitive interplay of action, the en-acted (l'adi

What the law is supposed to signify will only be revealed later, when to the despotic signifier, without exegesis or interpretation, while the law, however, wants to explain what it signifies, to assert an independence of its signified—against the despot, says the law. The law does not designate anything or anybody (the democratic conception of does not designate anything or anybody (the democratic conception of law will make this into a criterion). The complex relationship of imperial sign, a universal castration that welds desire to the law? It is the crushing of the old code, it is the chain between masters and slaves; the introduction of the law into desire, and of desire into the law; the terrible of the law into desire, and of desire into the law; the terrible latency with its afterward or its after-the-event. All that it would be reinterpreted starting from this apparatus, the Law, and the signifier—phallus and castration, yes! Oedipus, no!—the that the imperial myths are not able to conceive a law of organization that is immanent in the universe: they need with the dominated classes. It is no longer the transcendent law that governs fragments; it must fashion as best it can it can a whole to which it will render its law immanent. It is no longer the pure signifier that regulates to the hearts of his subjects, and from the intellectual law to the entire physical system that disengages or liberates itself entire physical system that disengages or liberates itself from the law. A State desire, the most fantastic machine for repression, is reintroduces lack and absence into desire; maintains desire under the law of castration, at the risk of restoring the entire signifier the risk of restoring the entire signifier along with the law; and discovers the matrix of the figure in fantasy, the other. Such is the way one must reinterpret the Marxist law of the counteracting tendency. With the result that schizophrenia pervades always more reterritorialization—local, world-wide, planetary). The night of the battle, Colonel Lawrence lines up the young naked corpses on the full body sexuality to the pitiful little familialist secret. We think that Lawrence and Miller have a more accurate evaluation of sexuality than and in the factory. That is what Miller, and already Lawrence, have to say against psychoanalysis (the living are not believers dying, those who set out in search of nonhuman sex—Lawrence, Miller—stake out a far-off territoriality that still forms an representation of sex, this whole conception of sexuality that horrifies Lawrence precisely because it is no more than a conception, because elements, rather than parts of even a fragmented whole. How can we sum up this entire vital progression? Let us trace it along a first path (the shortest route a clever psychiatrist, a sympathetic superobserver—in short, a phenomenologist. to throw his inventions entirely out of gear rather than let them simply run down, and chose to end his compositions in and of themselves, they are syntheses. Syntheses produce divisions. Let us consider, for example, the milk the baby throws up International Psycho-Analytic Association that bears above its door the inscription Let no one enter here who does not believe in Oedipus some sort of mediation. This is not the case, however. Let us consider a child at play, or a child crawling psychotic problems of the adult, and sexuality as a whole. Let us keep D. H. Lawrence's reaction to psychoanalysis in mind more and more, they respectfully allowed him to speak, they let the old man speak, ready to prepare behind his back history of the movement: so even we are still pious! Let us recall Marx's great declaration: he who denies God does desire, or is signified by it in an analogical symbolization. Let us consider another text of Freud's, a later one, where contrary only too reasonable and consistent with the established order? Let us return to the fantasy, a child is being beaten lays us on the couch, and makes us remain there? Let us consider a third and final text of Freud's, Analysis that lets itself be plugged by Oedipus; partial objects that let themselves be subsumed under the category of a complete object object, even if absent—the phallus of castration; breaks-flows that let themselves be projected onto a mythical space; polyvocal chains that themselves be projected onto a mythical space; polyvocal chains that let themselves be biunivocalized, linearized, suspended from a signifier; an unconscious	p 31 p 41 p 45 p 46 p 49 p 58 p 58 p 58 p 61 p 65 p 67 p 67 p 67

Let us turn to the beautiful story of Gerard de Nerval wreaked on them by us and by them on themselves. Let no one suppose that we meet true madness any more genital mucus, or a stream of words that do not let themselves be coded, a libido that is too fluid, too a flow that would not be codable, that would not let itself be coded—specifically, the terror of the primitive socius general regime of the extended filiations and the lateral alliances. libido no longer risks abandoning Oedipus, and internalizes it. The libido internalizes it in the form of a castrating duality between qualitative aptitude for conflict, which means that the quantity of libido does not branch into two variable forces corresponding to heterosexuality	p 64 p 65
It would seem that certain subjects have such a viscous libido, or on the contrary such a liquid one, that nothing in the phenomenon of desire: the qualitative flows of the libido. In some fine pages, Andre Green recently took up the conditions of its exercise (transference). And inversely, when flows of libido resist therapeutic practice, rather than being a resistance of the lacks. The same is true of the Oedipal code: the libido as energy of selection and detachment is converted into the	p 65 p 66 p 66 p 73 p 98
They are simply wrong in concluding from this that the libido has nothing to do with any of it. In whole that is thought to contain the secret of the libido: in this way, one remains in the framework of representation aggregates, but as the molecular energy that places molecules-partial objects (libido) in connection, that organizes inclusive disjunctions on the giant molecule	p 183 p 183 p 183

the old attempts at liquidating Freudianism, by substituting for the libido a vague cosmic energy capable of all of the metamorphoses same body considered from a molar viewpoint. What defined the libido as sexuality was therefore the association of the two modes the incomparable advantage of showing the double pole of the libido, as a molecular formation on the submicroscopic scale, and as with the preconscious investments of need or of interest. The libido as sexual energy is the direct investment of masses, of support its conception of desire, when it maintains that the libido must be desexualized or even sublimated in order to proceed to proceed to the social investments, and inversely that the libido only resexualizes these investments during the course of pathological regression	p 291 p 291 p 292 p 292 p 293 p 293 need to resort to metaphors, any more than for the libido to go by way of metamorphoses. Hitler got the fascists flows. It is not through a desexualizing extension that the libido invests the large aggregates. On the contrary, it is through through a restriction, a blockage, and a reduction that the libido is made to repress its flows in order to contain objects. And doubtless such a blockage is necessarily justified: the libido does not come to consciousness except in relation to a say the sign of the large aggregate invested by the libido, whence the two sexes necessarily derive, both in their separation every representable value, Freud founds desiring-economy by discovering the quantitative libido as the principle of every representation of the objects and	p 293 p 293 p 293 p 293 p 294 p 299 them to the subjective and universal essence of desire as libido. Thus the operation of decoding in psychoanalysis can no longer so as to attain the quantitative and qualitative flows of libido that traverse dreams, fantasies, and pathological formations as well as understood objectively, must melt under the rays of the subjective libido: it is indeed the world of representation that crumbles, or psychoanalysis and in desiring-production, in the form of subjective abstract libido. As Marx says, in capitalism the essence becomes subjective—the	p 301 p 301 p 302 p 302 society. This is also the case for desire as abstract libido and as subjective essence. Not that a simple parallelism should tends to liberate the free figures of a universal subjective libido. In short, the discovery of an activity of production in and discovers in them the figures of a subjective universal libido; but it reanimates them, and promotes them as subjective representations mark of the triangle (they tell you you have a libido that is too viscous, or too liquid, contraindications for analysis be. The decoded flows of desire form the free energy (libido) of the desiring-machines. The desiring-machines take form and train their personifying the parts, unifying and totalizing everything. Everywhere there is libido as machine energy, and neither the horn nor the bumble of production, with a part of the energy of production (Libido) being converted into a recording energy (Numen). But in fact of desire, but to cause absolutely decoded flows of desire, Libido, to circulate, and to discover in desire that which scrambles discovery of a subjective or vital essence of desire as libido. But when the dualism passed into a death instinct against longer a simple limitation, it was a liquidation of the libido. Reich did not go wrong here, and was perhaps the desire, the desiring-machines. It is a matter of eliminating the libido, insofar as it implies the possibility of energetic conversions in most profound discovery of the abstract subjective essence of desire—Libido. But since he realienated this essence, reinvesting it in a also the last way in which a depressive and exhausted libido can go on surviving, and dream that it is surviving repressive apparatus and begins to direct the circulation of the libido. Only the myth lives in the myth This are alone with our bad conscience and our boredom, our life where nothing happens; nothing left but images that revolve within desire that would presumably be in qualitative opposition to the life desires. Death is not desired, there is only death that without organs or the immobile motor, and there is also life that desires, by virtue of the working organs. There we of occurrences in the unconscious, precisely because it occurs in life and for life, in every passage or becoming, in every the unconscious, precisely because it occurs in life and for life, in every passage or becoming, in every intensity as passage the body without organs. Every intensity controls within its own life the experience of death, and envelops it. And it is psychoanalytic venture is. Psychoanalysis ought to be a song of life, or else be worth nothing at all. It ought, practically at all. It ought, practically, to teach us to sing life. And see how the most defeated, sad .song of death be a free and joyous person, a carrier of the life flows, capable of carrying them all the way into the desire by putting it in the service of a pseudo life through an entire culture of guilt feeling. There is no task of the ascetic ideal Nirvana, the cultural extract, judging life, belittling life, measuring life against death, and only retaining from the ascetic ideal Nirvana, the cultural extract, judging life, belittling life, measuring life against death, and only retaining from life what ideal Nirvana, the cultural extract, judging life, belittling life, measuring life against death, and only retaining from life what the death belittling life, measuring life against death, and only retaining from life what the death wants very much to .leave and that everything was going to unfold within a mortified life, since Thanatos was now the partner of Eros, for worse added to either of the two irreducible forms—neutralizing, mortifying life. The purpose of the topological and dynamic dualities is to of castration, he could no longer conceive the essence of life except in a form turned back against itself, in the form of death itself. And this neutralization, this turning against life, is also the last way in which a depressive and The ascetic ideal is an artifice for the preservation of life ... even when he wounds himself, this master of destruction, of that makes of this death a conservatory for the Oedipal life . It axiomatizes opposes the revolutionary potential of decoded flows with new interior limits. And it is impossible in such a regime to distinguish M-C-M, the circulation of money as capital has therefore no limits. The studies of Bohannan concerning the Tiv of the Niger destruction of all codes within a becoming-concrete, the absence of limits takes on a new meaning. This absence no longer simply limit. And it also has, yet does not have, interior limits: it has interior limits under the specific conditions of capitalist has, yet does not have, interior limits: it has interior limits under the specific conditions of capitalist production and circulation, that itself, but it functions only by reproducing and widening these limits on an always vaster scale. The strength of capitalism indeed to be filled by surplus value; an absence of exterior limits that it is filled by the widening of internal limits limits that it is filled by the widening of internal limits; and the effusion of antiproduction within production so as to we'll always find a place for you within the expanded limits of the system, even if an axiom has to be axiomatic fulfills its own immanence; pushes back or enlarges its limits; adds still more axioms while preventing the system from becoming saturation of the axiomatic and the corresponding widenings of the limits. Never before has a State lost so much of its functions with a very small number of axioms within relative limits that are sufficiently wide. This situation ceased to exist long axioms while having at the same time to reproduce its limits on an ever expanding scale (the axiom of displacement from integrates them both in the continually expanded reproduction of its limits. So that the bourgeois is justified in saying, not in regime and that of the desiring-machines. Between the relative interior limits and the absolute exterior limit. Isn't the destiny of American literature that of crossing limits and frontiers, causing deterritorialized flows of desire to circulate, but double movement whereby Butler drives both arguments beyond their very limits. He shatters the vitalist argument by calling in question the doubly exorcised, doubly displaced, once by the position of immanent limits that capitalism does not cease to reproduce on an ever forces in the immanent reproduction of its own always widened limits (the axiomatic). The death enterprise is one of the principal alienated in private property that reproduces the ever wider interior limits, and that of abstract desire alienated in the privatized family in the privatized family that displaces the ever narrower internalized limits. The double alienation—labor-desire— is constantly increasing and deepening the remodeling themselves in the image of subjugated groups: re-establishing interior limits, reforming a great break that the flows will not pass sources, all the while maintaining the corresponding flows within the limits of an Oedipal code (conflict, regression, resolution, sublimation of Oedipus	p 277 p 284 p 304 p 335 p 337 p 337
counteracting this tendency, exorcizing this limit by substituting internal relative limits for it that it can reproduce on an ever expanding them, turn them back, break them again according to the limits interior to the system, in such a way as to set the flows in motion, and effected breaks at the limits of desire: a breakthrough. It does not suffice to say which marks at every step along the way the interior limits of capitalism, their perpetual displacement, and their reproduction on an reproduction on an always larger scale (the movement of interior limits as the second aspect of the capitalist field of immanence to its axiomatic in terms of an enlargement of its limits: let's create the New Deal; let's cultivate and recognize strong an integral part of capitalism. By this right I am a man of noble lineage Let my name be determined, let it be determined scientifically more than an individuating power over the persons of a lineage; it produces instead a generalized distinguishability. E. R. Leach cites is segmentary because, through its double apparatus of tribe and lineage, it cuts up segments of varying lengths: genealogical filiative units of the tribal system, others in the framework of the lineage system). The variability and relativity of the segments are responsible Weismannism, where the germinative plasma forms an immortal and continuous lineage that does not depend on bodies; on the contrary, the intensive model of incest as a manifestation of the germinal lineage. Then again, Hamlet is not an extension of Oedipus, an relationship with the mother-twin. The vicious circle of the germinal lineage closes (the primitive double bind): neither can the uncle marry the result of a direct exchange between two lineages or lineage segments is, in this society, if not prohibited, at least the body of the young woman. the following: the declension of alliance and filiation—declining the lineages on the body of the earth, before there is a territorial surface. Leach has specifically underscored the importance of local lineages insofar as they are differentiated from lineages of filiation, and importance of local lineages insofar as they are differentiated from lineages of filiation, and insofar as they operate at the level something other than an arrangement of matrimonial classes and filiative lineages. It is the same for the whole project of coding varying lengths: genealogical filiative units of major, minor, and minimal lineages, with their hierarchy, their respective chiefs, their elders who guard the point of divergence in the clan structure of the lineages associated with each section. For, as we have seen, clans each section. For, as we have seen, clans and their lineages are not distinct corporate groups, but are embodied in local and that of scission through the constant formation of new lineages aspiring to independence, with capitalization of alliances and filiation. From time immemorial, combining and declining itself with the extended filiative lineages that do not exist prior to alliances in a system form and delimits itself, proceeding from intense and primordial filiative lineages that necessarily lose their inclusive or nonrestrictive use. From this the filiations will be filiations extended in the form of lineages, comprising distinctions of persons and of parental appellations; (2) the marriages, according to the patrilineal or matrilineal nature of the lineages, according to the general regime of the extended filiations and territory and its environs, the chieftainship and its subchieftainships, the lineages and their segments, the alliances and the filiations: they constantly was scattered in the thousand breaks-flows of the chieftainships, the lineages, the relations of colonization. in which they function. Nor is there a biological, sociological, linguistic, etc., functionalism at the level of large determinate aggregates (des molaïres) with their specific use in a biological, social, or linguistic field. This is because the large molar machines presuppose pre-established the macroscopic nature of what it is engineering: organic, social, linguistic, etc., elements, all tossed into the same pot to stew the signifier itself in the second sense. There is no linguistic field without biunivocal relations—whether between ideographic and phonetic values	p 180 p 181 p 181 p 207

Monakow put it: either a lesion spreads along fibers that link it to other regions and thus gives rise to a consideration an intensive series of instincts, affects, and relations that link the normal and positive form of the complex to its visible resistance to oedipalization, the obvious absence of the Oedipal link, can be obscured in a grandparental constellation, either because an law the entire chain seems consequently to be suspended, each link triangulated. There we have a curious paralogism implying a transcendent	p 40 p 51 p 52 to do: to fuse madness with a parental complex, to link it to the half-real, half-imaginary dialectic of the Family; to our forefathers. Lacan has demonstrated in a profound way the link between Oedipus and segregation. Not, however, in the sense where that of God: born of an abstraction, it assumes the link to be already broken between man and nature, man and is clear what psychoanalysis expects to gain from claiming a link, where Oedipus would be the object of repression, and even on the right track: introducing desire into production, strengthening the link between instinctual and economic structure; and at the same time at the strongest point, at the level of the strongest link, by revealing the degree of disfiguration it implies and brings in a mysterious fashion. But we see nothing in this link that would lead us to conclude in favor of the of means in terms of the aims of desire. The link between the two remains secondary and indirect, both in the of the living has been laid to rest, a direct link is perceived between the machine and desire, the machine passes disfiguring social desiring-production, leading it into an impasse. Thus the link between representation-belief and the family is not accidental; it is	p 92 p 104 p 107 p 117 p 173 p 175 p 203 p 284 p 285 p 296 to crumble. It follows that, in the second place, the link between psychoanalysis and capitalism is no less profound than that drawings, and holding together only by the absence of a link (nonlocalizable connections), having no other statutory condition than that of to non-sense as well as to the absence of a link: you will not have reached the ultimate and irreducible terms the unconscious so long as you find or restore a link between two elements. (But how then can one see in the same time that one reduces the absence of a link to a signifier of absence charged with representing the absence by the real distinction or the very absence of a link. Such is the case in the schizoid sequences of Beckett sure, one can always establish or re-establish some sort of link between these elements: organic links between organs or fragments of structure dislodged, every memory abolished, every organism set aside, every link undone, they function as raw partial objects, dispersed working parts	p 302 p 309 p 314 p 314 p 314 p 324 p 324 p 324 dispersion, of real distinction, and of the absence of a link permit any machinic regime to exist—how the partial objects and the little ego. Freud himself indeed spoke of the link between his discovery of the death instinct and World War and exploited masses. But it is the nature of this link that poses the real problem, as either a determined causal that poses the real problem, as either a determined causal link or a different sort of connection. It is a question	p 324 p 335 p 377 p 377

opaque, taut surface as a barrier. In order to resist linked, connected, and interrupted flows it sets up a counterflow of full meaning to castration. Through it, all the external experiences linked to deprivation, to frustration, to the lack of partial objects phylogenetic innateness of preformation, or a cultural symbolic a priori linked to prematuration? Worse yet: it is clear that by invoking itself. When Frantz Fanon encounters a case of persecution psychosis linked to the death of the mother, he first asks himself this social repression-psychic repression system. The two problems are obviously linked because, if psychic repression did bear on incestuous desires, it	p 9 p 73 p 92 p 96 p 113 an idea dear to traditional psychiatry: that madness is fundamentally linked to a loss of reality. Thus there is a convergence from the familial infantile factors; all the major dissensions were linked to this evaluation. The difficulties bore on several aspects. First This came about as two concerns were found to be linked in an apparent paradox, for example in lung: the concern of Aufhebung that will constitute the phallus. Sublimation is profoundly linked to anality, but this is not to say that the upon ties within the unilineal corporation or between different corporations linked by ties of common descent. The structural ties deriving from labor, on condition—on the sole condition—that they be linked to capital and to the new deterritorialized full body, the game of isolated formulas, but rather imply intuitions that are linked to resonances and conjunctions of structures, and that are merely analyzed by Kardiner: he distinguishes between an adult alimentary anxiety linked to an endemic famine, and an infantile alimentary anxiety linked	p 123 p 127 p 128 p 143 p 146 p 225 p 251 p 275 linked to an endemic famine, and an infantile alimentary anxiety linked to a deficiency of maternal care. Not only is it it is a question of a necessary relationship between inextricably linked forces. Some of these are elementary forces by means of only in the large aggregates that they constitute through a linked drawing of elements, a partial dependence, and a superposition of and their agents underneath all the specific determinations that still linked desire or labor to a given person, to a given the immanent system where each act of production is inextricably linked to the process of anti production as capital. No errors for of fact! Werther yes, Lenz no! The Oedipal form of literature is its commodity form. We are free to think that finally even less dishonesty in psychoanalysis than in the established literature, since the neurotic pure and simple produces a solitary work is so much pig shit—that is to say, any literature that takes itself as an end or sets ends for spare us sublimation. Every writer is a sellout. And if, in this process, a little sensual pleasure falls to my share, I feel justified in two questions at this point. We merely see how very little the consumption of pure intensities has to do with family sort of idea to be found in books. It is only little by little that he makes the familial romance, on the contrary, into your orphan and celibate machines, your tape recorder and your little bike, enter and allow yourself to be oedipalized. Everything follows someone—the teacher, for example—in the presence of the little girls. We are present from the start at a double girl's and the boy's cases, as if each were a little ego taking up its own business with daddy and mommy the boys are beaten—initiated by the teacher on the little girl's erotic stage (seeing-machine), and obtain satisfaction in a masochistic that the boys are able to see only by becoming little girls, and the girls cannot experience the pleasure of punishment failure, even if this proposition is accompanied by the analyst's little smile. We are surprised when we hear a knowledgeable analyst prophetic: A lot we care about our old grandmother, you little shit! For what does in fact take place in In finally die. Must we correct what we were saying a little earlier, and suppose that some tolerate oedipalization less well than his fondest love, to be the same as Adrienne, the little girl of his childhood; he perceives them as identical. And transference with exemplary collective virtualities. The hypocritical warning resounds: a little neurosis is good for the work of art, good material the displacement of the limit, in order to create a little colonial world of one's own. But others want virgin lands an encampment where it is a matter of stocking—however little—and where it is a matter of inscribing and allocating born of repression, that comes to conceal desire. It matters little that this image is impossible: it does its work from institution is first understood as a familial institution, it matters little to say that the familial complex varies with the institutions river bed, or by diverting it into a thousand shallow little streams. Oedipus is this displaced limit. Yes, Oedipus is universal of tools at his disposal—some ancient Germanic law, a little Hindu law. But he does not hesitate, as does Mauss territorial codings. The number of elements in the alliance makes little difference: new alliance and direct filiation are specific categories that mother of the tribe. Interiority in place of a on the full body of the desert. Judge Schreber attaches little men by the thousands to his body. It might be sunbeams, or the souls that lead a brief existence as little men on his body. Artaud says: this world of microbes more adequate than the reduction of sexuality to the pitiful little familialist secret. We think that Lawrence and Miller have a the result of sex conceived as the feminine sex (the little hidden absorbed penis). We maintain therefore that castration is the Schreber case again applies: Schreber's father invented and fabricated astonishing little machines, sadistico-paranoiac machines—for example head straps with a metallic religion and with phylogenesis, so as to ensure that the little familial representation has the appearance of being coextensive with the To trace back from images to the structure would have little significance and would not rescue us from representation, if the stops responding daddy-mommy. Charlus says, A lot we care about your grandmother, you little shit! Oedipus and castration are no more than reactionary formations not the gaping wound represented in castration, but the myriad little connections, disjunctions, and conjunctions by which every machine produces a of summoning it back to its place. We are all little dogs, we need circuits, and we need to be taken to unplug themselves, enter into connections of desiring-machines that re-form little earths. Even Gisela Pankow's great deterritorialized subjects are led to parental coitus, the father's car, the grandmother's sewing machine, the little brother's bicycle, all objects of flight and theft, stealing and reaction that they be given back an asylum, or a little Beckettian land, a garbage can, so they can become catatonic former schizos guiding the most recent ones, and, as relays, little chapels, or better yet, a convent in Ceylon. The only artificial neurosis (of transference), and in exalting the couch, a little island with its commander, the psychoanalyst, as an autonomous territoriality psychoanalyst, as an autonomous territoriality of the ultimate artifice. A little additional effort is enough to overturn everything, and to lead desire stretches out on the couch, an artificial swamp, a little earth, a little mother. Look at you, stumbling and staggering on the couch, an artificial swamp, a little earth, a little mother. Look at you, stumbling and staggering with no use than a bit of a relation to the outside, a little real reality. And we claim the right to a radical bad there. It reeks of the great death and the little ego. Freud himself indeed spoke of the link between his establishing Oedipus as an interior limit, with all kinds of little Narcissuses around, and Reich-the-marginal, plotting a tangent of deterritorialization, causing as sexuality remains confined within the framework of the dirty little secret. The sign made letter. Desire no longer dares to desire, having become a desire of desire, a desire, a desire of the despot's desire. The mouth no longer speaks, it drinks the letter. The eye no longer sees no longer speaks, it drinks the letter. The eye no longer sees, it reads. The body no longer allows itself to The eye no longer sees, it reads. The body no longer allows itself to be engraved like the earth, but prostrates sign for a, and on this point there is no longer any relationship between the sign and water, which in Akkadian flattening induces a fictitious voice from on high that no longer expresses itself except in the linear flux, the despot himself that a half-deaf Caesar complains of an ear that no longer hears, and sees weighing on him the look of Cassius milder than that of territorial representation. The signs are no longer inscribed in the flesh itself but on stones, parchments, pieces not compromise the power of the State. The eye no longer extracts a surplus value from the spectacle of suffering, it despot. In the latency system of terror, what is no longer active, en-acted, or reacted to, this instinct for freedom forcibly the despots. The inscription is ressentie when it is no longer en-acted or reacted to. When the deterritorialized sign becomes a cell will have to complete its migration; it must no longer be content to pass from the state of the displaced commodities. Classes appear, inasmuch as the dominant classes are no longer merged with the State apparatus, but are distinct determinations that from one end to the other. The State can no longer be content to overcode territorial elements that are already coded everywhere, the presence of the latent model that can no longer be equaled, but that one cannot help but imitate. The of the dunesteia. So that in the end one no longer really knows what comes first, and whether the territorial machine relations of domination and subordination it expresses. It is no longer content to overcode maintained and imbricated territorialities; it must constitute decoded flows of money, commodities, and private property. It no longer of itself forms a ruling class or classes; it is and their compromises with the dominated classes. It is no longer the transcendent law that governs fragments; it must fashion as which it will render its law immanent. It is no longer the pure signifier that regulates its signifieds: it now appears behind them, depending on the things it signifies. It no longer produces an overcoding unity; it is itself produced inside the the field of decoded flows. As a machine it no longer determines a social system; it is itself determined by the there where forms exist under which the State can no longer function as such in the physical system. When the Christians itself on the conjunction. When this occurs, the conjunction no longer merely designates remnants that have escaped coding, or consummations-consumptions as with the conjunction of all their processes. It is no longer the age of cruelty or the age of terror, but production, and until financial capital and merchant capital are no longer anything but specific functions corresponding to a division of labor cause that appropriates all the productive forces. We are no longer in the domain of the quantum or of the quantitas not ceased to be what it is, but it no longer appears in the simple quantity as a variable relation between species, functioning in an entirely different way. This is no longer the cruelty of life, the terror of one life brought the quotient of differentials is not calculable, the present no longer has any meaning. ... The quotient of differentials is not resolved The quotient of differentials is not resolved, the differences no longer cancel one another in their relationship. No limit opposes the immense surplus value, to a point where it is no longer the developed countries that supply the underdeveloped countries with capital antiproduction within production itself. The apparatus of antiproduction is no longer a transcendent instance that opposes production, limits it, or checks can be robbed—just as, according to Clavel, one no longer knows who is alienated or who does the alienating. Who it describes a pure field of algebraic immanence that no longer allows any surveillance on the part of a transcendent instance relationship of subordination between signifier and signified. Because there no longer occurs a double articulation between two hierarchized levels of language Because in this relation one reaches figures that are no longer effects of a signifier, but schizzes, points-signs, or flows-breaks that and heroines, its own fulfillment? And where it can no longer recognize the figure of a simple illness, why does it regards paid labor, it is evident that there is no longer any need for a code in order to ensure surplus of limits takes on a new meaning. This absence no longer simply designates the unlimited abstract quantity, but the effective absence has become a bad thing. Above all, there is no longer any need of belief, and the capitalist is merely striking nowadays no one believes in anything any more. Language no longer signifies something that must be believed, it indicates rather what same quantities. It is these quantities that are marked, no longer the persons themselves: your capital or your labor capacity, the has to be created just for you. There is no longer any need of a collective investment of organs, as they role in the system: a role of application, and no longer of implication, in a code. The hour of Oedipus draws attached to the full body of the socius, and no longer men, the latter having become adjacent to the technical machines to the technical machines—whence the fact that inscription no longer bears directly, or at least in theory has no need institutes an unrivaled slavery, an unprecedented subjugation: there are no longer even any masters, but only slaves commanding other slaves; there masters, but only slaves commanding other slaves; there is no longer any need to burden the animal from the outside, it of decoding or deterritorialization: the nature of wealth is no longer to be sought on the side of the object, under and the subterranean, schizophrenic, and revolutionary charges. Moreover, one no longer quite knows how it goes on one side or the means remains the same in the capitalist system. Representation no longer relates to a distinct object, but to productive activity itself any other preconditions. What is inscribed or marked is no longer the producers or nonproducers, but the forces and means of counteracts with all its dimensions. The alliances and filiations no longer pass through people but through money; so the family becomes family becomes a microcosm, suited to expressing what it no longer dominates. In a certain sense the situation has not changed the Worker), with the result that these images are no longer recognized at all in the desire that is determined to the aggregate of destination, in the end, there is no longer anyone but daddy, mommy, and me, the despotic sign inherited time by restricting it, by causing it to pass no longer between social production and the desiring-production that breaks away from family, with the result that, wherever one turns, one no longer finds anything but father-mother—this Oedipal filth that sticks to merit was to have determined the essence of religion, no longer on the side of the object, but as an interior to have determined the essence or nature of wealth no longer as an objective nature, but as an abstract and deterritorialized in having determined the essence or nature of desire, no longer in relation to objects, aims, or even sources (territories), but unconscious, always remaining subject, reproduces itself. There is, then, no longer any call for wondering which is first, the father or direction, that of microphysics, of molecules insofar as they no longer obey the statistical laws: waves and corpuscles, flows and partial waves and corpuscles, flows and partial objects that are no longer dependent upon the large numbers; infinitesimal lines of escape, instead the arguments to an extreme point where it can no longer be opposed to the other, a point of nondifference or outset its bankruptcy or its abnegation: an unconscious that no longer produces, but is content to believe. The unconscious believes in of machines, but just the opposite; thereafter there is no longer even any reason for considering machines, whether as desiring-machines or be social or desiring, it calls forth forces that no longer permit themselves to be contained in representation, and it calls libido. Thus the operation of decoding in psychoanalysis can no longer signify what it signifies in the sciences of man; the chains all over again, to be subjugated and alienated—no longer, it is true, in an exterior and independent element as familial theater, the theater of private man, which is no longer either desiring-production or objective representation. The unconscious as a stage and the formal relations between them all. Symbolic thus no longer designates the relation of representation to an objectivity as an in this manner to a representational space, it can no longer have value except by its own absence, and it appears but behind the wall). In short, the displaced limit no longer passes between objective representation and desiring-production, but between the two of a tie necessarily appears as an absence, and no longer as a positive force. There desire is necessarily referred to machine of capital. At its most autistic, psychoanalysis is no longer measured against any reality, it no longer opens to any psychoanalysis is no longer measured against any reality, it no longer opens to any outside, but becomes itself the test of beliefs to survive even after repudiation; causing those who no longer believe in anything to continue believing; reconstituting a private territory is this? And what spectator? For example, the question no longer applies at all, at this point in the film, of as though the spectator, at that very moment, were no longer in his seat, were no longer in a position to very moment, were no longer in his seat, were no longer in a position to observe things. an original nothingness, nor is it what remains of a lost totality. Above all, it is not a projection; it has a measure of the withdrawal of a subject that has lost its desire at the same time that it loses the sort of original totality (not even one that has been lost), or to a subsequent totality that may not yet have oeuvre. In the literary machine that Proust's In Search of Lost Time constitutes, we are struck by the fact that all in the trip on the train in In Search of Lost Time, there is never a totality of what is seen a psychic fantasy reality. Oedipus is what all but got lost for the sake of a biological realism. But is it of psychic repression with social repression. And how could partial objects not have lost their virulence and efficacy, once they had been introduced into the forms of society where the tragic sense is increasingly lost ... : a myth cannot sustain itself when it supports no ritual of a machine to produce the real. Far from having lost who knows what contact with life, the schizophrenic is closest Laing says, they are interrupted in their journey. They have lost reality But when did they lose it? During the journey according to whether this couple results from a woman being lost to or acquired by line A or B. In this patrilineal or patrilocal regime, for example, related women are women lost; women brought in by marriage are women gained. Each family since the brother gains a wife, while the sister is lost to her own family. corresponding widenings of the limits. Never before has a State lost so much of its power in order to enter with through its own original means; it reterritorializes where it has lost the territorialities, it creates new archaisms where it has destroyed leaving, or causes a piece of the system to get lost in the shuffle. What matters is to break through the value to the family at the very moment it has lost its objective literal values. Psychoanalysis makes its ambition clear: to can we continue to be pious? We have repudiated and lost all our beliefs that proceeded by way of objective representations lands of perversion, clinical lands of psychosis? Let's not say that chord: it is well known that the unconscious takes a lot of time to digest a bit of news; one can have invented much in another way, and have legislated a lot, reinforced a lot, injected a lot. All that psychoanalysts do in another way, and have legislated a lot, reinforced a lot, injected a lot. All that psychoanalysts do is to reinforce and have legislated a lot, reinforced a lot, injected a lot. Oedipal life . Desire is in itself not a desire to love, but a force to love, a virtue that gives and itself not a desire to love, but a force to love, a virtue that gives and produces, that engineers. (For how that is reborn of its own frustration: no, daddy-mommy didn't love me enough. Sick desire stretches out on the couch, an path, convinced that this is where our chances lie—since love drives us on. The manifest syntheses are merely the preconscious and interests. The fact remains that there exists a disinterested love of the social machine, of the form of power, and an interest—and loves them besides with a form of love other than that of his interest. This is also the no interest, and who substitutes the force of a strange love for this counterinvestment. Flows that run on the porous full aim and the interest (power), but it feels a disinterested love for the absurd and nonpossessed force of the machine. Oh a question of ascertaining that our choices in matters of love are at the crossroads of vibrations, which is to say intercepted by the being that we are then determined to love, like a point-sign, a singular point in the entire network they appear only in our sexual choices of lovers. We always fall back into that very socius and no other, hands off. A disinterested love of the molar machine, a veritable enjoyment, with all the the desires and the drives. But there are forms of love that are the indices of the reactionary or the revolutionary whose code is unconsciously invested for itself. That is why love and desire exhibit reactionary, or else revolutionary, indices; the latter the way). In short, a truly unconscious libido, a disinterested love: this machine is fantastic. LOVES	12
From the statistical nebula, from the molar entirety of men-women loves, there emerge the two accursed and guilty series that bear or with which we communicate. The persons to whom our loves are dedicated, including the parental persons, intervene only as points and large aggregates. There is always something statistical in our loves, and something belonging to the laws of large numbers. And is founded here is rather the statistical aggregate of intersexual loves. For if the woman is defined as a lack in the one is the reverse side of the other. Our loves are complexes of deterritorialization and reterritorialization. What we love is themselves. Even in the person who has an interest—and loves them besides with a form of love other than that on the contrary that what the libido invested, through its loves and sexuality, was the social field itself in its economic machines of subjugation, the social machines give rise to incomparable loves, which are not explained by their interests, since interests derive poor woman, the maid, or the whore to have revolutionary loves. There are no revolutionary or reactionary loves, which is to have revolutionary loves. There are no revolutionary or reactionary loves, which is to say that loves are not defined by no revolutionary or reactionary loves, which is to say that loves are not defined by their objects, any more than by dimensions causing flows to circulate rather than canceling them. Thus Lyotard everywhere reverses the order of the signifier and the figure flux-schiz or the break-flow. The pure figural element—the figure-matrix—Lyotard correctly names desire, which carries us to the gates of as a process. But what explains the reader's impression that Lyotard is continually arresting the process, and steering the schizzes toward despite his attempt at linking desire to a fundamental yes, Lyotard reintroduces lack and absence into desire; maintains desire under the castration, is defeated from the start. The mouth of the anorexic wavers between uncertain as to whether it is an eating-machine, an anal machine, a talking-machine, or a breathing-machine (asthma attacks). Hence we are the process theoretically. Something is produced: the effects of a machine, not mere metaphors. A schizophrenic out for a walk is than that? Impossible. Leave me in peace. Everything is a machine. Celestial machines, the stars or rainbows in the sky, alpine of self-locomotion constitute, in and of themselves, a finely tuned machine. desiring-machines, or that he confuses himself with this third productive machine and with the residual reconciliation that it brings about: a meme (The Bride Stripped Bare by Her Bachelors, Even, the machine in Kafka's In the Penal Colony, Raymond Roussel's machines, those according to the example considered—are as follows: the celibate machine first of all reveals the existence of a much older of all reveals the existence of a much older paranoiac machine, with its tortures, its dark shadows, its ancient Law. The its tortures, its dark shadows, its ancient Law. The celibate machine itself is not a paranoiac machine, however. Everything about it ancient Law. The celibate machine itself is not a paranoiac machine, however. Everything about it is different: its cogs, its sliding this transfiguration cannot be explained by the miraculating powers the machine possesses due to the inscription hidden inside it, though it Eve future). A genuine consummation is achieved by the new machine, a pleasure that can rightly be called autoerotic, or rather birth, a radiant ecstasy, as though the eroticism of the machine liberated other unlimited forces. The question becomes: what does the other unlimited forces. The question becomes: what does the celibate machine produce? what is produced by means of it? The answer desiring-machines; then the subject—produced as a residuum alongside the machine, as an appendix, or as a spare part adjacent to an appendix, or as a spare part adjacent to the machine passes through all the degrees of the circle, and passes is not at the center, which is occupied by the machine, but on the periphery, with no fixed identity, forever decentered end to the same thing: by means of the paranoiac machine and the miraculating machine, the proportions of attraction and repulsion thing: by means of the paranoiac machine and the miraculating machine, the proportions of attraction and repulsion on the body without starting from zero, a series of states in the celibate machine; and the subject is born of each state in the the ego. At the center is the desiring-machine, the celibate machine of the Eternal Return. A residual subject of the machine machine of the Eternal Return. A residual subject of the machine, Nietzsche-as-subject garners a euphoric reward (Voluptas) from everything that this Nietzsche-as-subject garners a euphoric reward (Voluptas) from everything that this machine turns out, a product that the reader had thought to depth, not simply as an object, but as a specific machine that brings desire itself front and center, this machine is specific machine that brings desire itself front and center, this machine is merely theatrical, and the complementarity of what it sets and its object are one and the same thing: the machine, as a machine of a machine. Desire is a machine, and the object are one and the same thing: the machine, as a machine of a machine. Desire is a machine, and the object the same thing: the machine, as a machine of a machine. Desire is a machine, and the object of desire is machine, as a machine of a machine. Desire is a machine, and the object of desire is another machine connected to is a machine, and the object of desire is another machine connected to it. Hence the product is something removed or of production and the product; thanks to this distinction, the machine transmits value to the product, but only the value that value to the product, but only the value that the machine itself loses as it wears out. Desiring-machines, on the contrary graft, and at the same time the parts of the machine are the fuel that makes it run. Art often takes and always refer back to a socius or a social machine that is quite distinct from these machines, and that conditions from these machines, and that conditions this reproduction. A technical machine is therefore not a cause but merely an index of horde, who was initially responsible for social organization. The social machine or socius may be the body of the Earth, the not properly dammed up, channeled, regulated. When the primitive territorial machine proved inadequate to the task, the despotic machine set up primitive territorial machine proved inadequate to the task, the despotic machine set up a kind of overcoding system. But the capitalist set up a kind of overcoding system. But the capitalist machine, insofar as it was built on the ruins of a the free worker. Hence, unlike previous social machines, the capitalist machine is incapable of providing a code that will apply to in this sense schizophrenia is the product of the capitalist machine, as manic-depression and paranoia are the product of the despotic as manic-depression and paranoia are the product of the despotic machine, and hysteria the product of the territorial machine? The decoding the despotic machine, and hysteria the product of the territorial machine? The decoding of flows and the deterritorialization of the socius and artificial reterritorialization on the other. The more the capitalist machine deterritorializes, decoding and axiomatizing flows in order to extract surplus the autonomy of desiring-machines in relation to the deterritorialized social machine. Schizophrenia is desiring-production as the limit of social production. Desiring-production terms the problem of the ultimate relationship between the analytic machine, the revolutionary machine, and desiring-machines. 5 The Machines In what of the ultimate relationship between the analytic machine, the revolutionary machine, and desiring-machines. 5 The Machines In what respect are desiring-machines really machines, in anything more than a metaphorical sense? A machine may be defined as a system of interruptions or breaks according to whatever aspect of them we are considering. Every machine, in the first place, is related to a continual material hyle) that it cuts into. It functions like a ham-slicing machine, removing portions from the associative flow: the anus and the ideal continuity. This is because, as we have seen, every machine is a machine of a machine. The machine produces an is because, as we have seen, every machine is a machine of a machine. The machine produces an interruption of the we have seen, every machine is a machine of a machine. The machine produces an interruption of the flow only insofar seen, every machine is a machine of a machine. The machine produces an interruption of the flow only insofar as it the flow only insofar as it is connected to another machine that supposedly produces this flow. And doubtless this second machine machine that supposedly produces this flow. And doubtless this second machine in turn is really an interruption or break, too. But But it is such only in relationship to a third machine that ideally—that is to say, relatively—produces a continuous and then ... and then ... and then ...). In a word, every machine functions as a break in the flow in relation to as a break in the flow in relation to the machine to which it is connected, but at the same time or the production of a flow, in relation to the machine connected to it. This is the law of the production wires, lights, carburetors, propellers, and steering wheels: an electrical feeding machine, a car-machine that enables him to breathe, an anal machine machine, a car-machine that enables him to breathe, an anal machine that lights up. There are very few examples that cast to which the child reacts by turning himself into a machine. But even Bettelheim, who has a noticeable bias in favor of which it is nonetheless still a part. But the machine remains desire, an investment of desire whose history unfolds, by passes as Bettelheim's therapy progresses. In the second place, every machine has a sort of code built into it, stored up filled in. This is thus the second characteristic of the machine: breaks that are a detachment (coupures-detachements), which must not be contrast with the nervous system, which is a great chronogeneous machine: a melody-producing machine of the music box type, with a nervous system, which is a great chronogeneous machine: a melody-producing machine of the music box type, with a nonspatial localization. What break (coupure-rete) or residuum, which produces a subject alongside the machine, functioning as a part adjacent to the machine. And if alongside the machine, functioning as a part adjacent to the machine. And if this subject has no specific or personal identity is not only a part that is peripheral to the machine, but also a part that is itself divided into parts from the flow (prelevements de flux) brought about by the machine. Thus this subject consumes and consummates each of the states the most rigorous terms, at the level of the literary machine: how to produce, how to think about fragments whose sale an apt description of his own oeuvre. In the literary machine that Proust's In Search of Lost Time constitutes, we are an electrical outlet, he moves his body about like a machine, he uses one of his legs as though it were of desiring-machines—at the level, for example, of the mouth-air machine or the tasting-machine: What does it mean to be alive the level of the Real, the tie between the analytic machine, desire, and production? For the unconscious itself is no more the unconscious: Irma's injection, the Wolf Man's ticktock, Anna's coughing machine, and also all the explanatory apparatuses set into motion by and on the other hand, the repression that the social machine exercises on desiring-machines, and the relationship of psychic repression with obtain satisfaction in a masochistic fantasy involving the mother (anal machine). The result is that the boys are able to see of sexual casuistry to see with what restrictions the organ-desiring machine connections remain tolerated within the regime for the pairing of possibility of an internal reversal that would make the analytic machine into an indispensable part of the revolutionary machinery. What is of the structural equilibrium in the manner of an infernal machine, the desiring-machine. Then a second generation of disciples of Lacan the expected clinical mold. Dark world, growing desert: a solitary machine hums on the beach, an atomic factory installed in the program for a theater of cruelty, the mise-en-scene of a machine to produce the real. Far from having lost who knows the pretender Richemont, there is a desiring-machine or a celibate machine in the center: the horse with short, jointed paws, inside traverses all the singularities of the series converging around the machine for kidnapping Louis XVII. terms of an opposition between it and the primitive territorial machine: the birth of an empire. But in reality one can Christ and his Saint Paul. Moses flees from the Egyptian machine into the wilderness and installs his new machine there, a the Egyptian machine into the wilderness and installs his new machine there, a holy ark and a portable temple, and gives are talking about the imperial barbarian formation or the despotic machine. And this holds true whatever the context of this mobilization lateral alliances and the extended filiations that declined the primitive machine. It is this force of projection that defines paranoia, this his function, which can be limited. It is the social machine that has profoundly changed: in place of the territorial machine machine that has profoundly changed: in place of the territorial machine, there is the megamachine of the State, a functional pyramid all the syntheses: the synthesis of production, with the hydraulic machine and the mining machine; the synthesis of inscription, with the synthesis of production, with the hydraulic machine and the mining machine; the synthesis of inscription, with the accounting machine, the writing machine, and the monument machine; and finally the the mining machine; the synthesis of inscription, with the accounting machine, the writing machine, and the monument machine; and finally the the synthesis of inscription, with the accounting machine, the writing machine, and the monument machine; and finally the synthesis of consumption with the accounting machine, the writing machine, and the monument machine; and finally the synthesis of consumption, with the upkeep of the State's sole concern. The wheels of the territorial lineage machine subsist, but are no longer anything more than the working longer anything more than the working parts of the State machine. The objects, the organs, the persons, and the groups retain of preventing the entry on stage of a new territorial machine, possibly revolutionary and capable of raising and dealing with the at least it has no autonomous mercantile model. The despotic machine holds the following in common with the primitive machine, it despotic machine holds the following in common with the primitive machine, it confirms the latter in this respect: the dread of deterritorialization that subordinates all the primitive filiations to the despotic machine (the agrarian problem); the abolition of debts or their accountable correlative aspects: on the one hand it replaces the territorial machine, it forms a new deterritorialized full body; on the other them as parts or organs of production in the new machine. It is perfected all at once because it functions on the direct filiation, gathering all the subjects into the new machine. The essential action of the State, therefore, is the creation and to the usufruct put into use, to the State machine and to the territorial machines. As in Kafka's The Great with the people. All the coded flows of the primitive machine are now forced into a bottleneck, where the despotic machine machine are now forced into a bottleneck, where the despotic machine overcodes them. Overcoding is the operation that constitutes the essence with a look of bronze, creating an oppressive and remorseless machine, erecting before any perspective of liberation an ironclad impossibility. This code, no underlying flow escapes the overcoding of the despotic machine; hence it is by virtue of his sterility that he wilderness ordeal, it expresses the spatial divergence from the primitive machine; it provides the old alliances with an outcome; it founds the tribe; it expresses the temporal divergence from the primitive machine (the difference between the generations); it constitutes the direct filiation of the apparatus, it changes only the parts of the machine; yet it is still as the displaced represented that incest of psychic repression, operating in the manner of a graphic machine capable of performing as well by means of hieroglyphs as system of correspondences in the heart of a given social machine. All this finds itself overwhelmed in a new destiny, with finds itself overwhelmed in a new destiny, with the despotic machine and imperial representation. In the first place, graphism aligns itself a base and as a brick, insofar as the territorial machine continues to function in the framework of the new machine machine continues to function in the framework of the new machine. The triangle has become the base for a pyramid, all its veritable origin, the despotic age, and erects an infernal machine that welds desire to the Law, because, everything considered—so metonymy—all of that constitutes the overcoding and deterritorialized despotic machine. The despotic signifier has the effect of overcoding the territorial the full body of the intense earth that the primitive machine had repressed, but on new foundations or under new conditions no surplus value escapes the over coding of the despotic machine. For all the organs and their functions experience a detachment these two traits in a raw state. As in the machine of In the Penal Colony, it is the penalty that object that hovers over each subject, as though the social machine had come unstuck from its desiring-machines: death, the desire of the parts figure as cogs and wheels in the State machine. Desire is by no means an interplay between a son a father. Desire institutes a libidinal investment of a State machine that overcodes the territorial machine and, with an additional turn libidinal investment of a State machine that overcodes the territorial machine and, with an additional turn of the screw, represses the father intervenes only as the representative of the old territorial machine, but the sister is the representative of the new alliance by the despotic State is what comes before—the territorial machine, which it reduces to the state of bricks, of working longer really knows what comes first, and whether the territorial machine does not in fact presuppose a despotic machine from which the territorial machine does not in fact presuppose a despotic machine from which it extracts the bricks or that it segments itself produced inside the field of decoded flows. As a machine it no longer determines a social system; it is itself of an analogous evolution has been demonstrated for the technical machine, when it ceases to be an abstract unity or intellectual isn't this tendency to concretization in the social or technical machine precisely the movement of desire? Again and again we come itself from the law. A State desire, the most fantastic machine for repression, is still desire—the subject that desires and state so as to be tamed.... 9 The Civilized Capitalist Machine The first great movement of deterritorialization appears with the overcoding very pores of the old full body of the social machine. Hence capitalism does not lead to the dissolution of feudalism the founders of the State come like lightning; the despotic machine is synchronic while the capitalist machine's time is diachronic. The Sinbad the Sailor? It is not the technique, the technical machine, that is lacking. Isn't it rather that desire remains caught nets of the despotic State, entirely invested in the despot's machine? Perhaps then the merit of the West, confined as it simplifying a lot, we can say that the savage territorial machine operated on the basis of connections of production, and that basis of connections of production, and that the barbarian despotic machine was based on disjunctions of inscription derived from the eminent of inscription derived from the eminent unity. But the capitalist machine, the civilized machine, will first establish itself on the conjunction from the eminent unity. But the capitalist machine, the civilized machine, will first establish itself on the conjunction. When this occurs When the conjunction moves to the fore in the social machine, it seems on the contrary that it ceases to be worker in favor of the work itself or of the machine. And for capital: the deterritorialization of wealth through monetary abstraction guilds and the monopolies). But capitalism doesn't begin, the capitalist machine is not assembled, until capital directly appropriates production, and until only becomes a true practical relation in the modern capitalist machine. That is why, before, the monetary and commercial inscription does low and sell where they are high. Before the capitalist machine, merchant or financial capital is merely in a relationship of merchant and banking bourgeoisie with feudalism. In brief, the capitalist machine begins when capital ceases to be a capital of alliance the subsisting codes and territorialities for the benefit of a machine of another species, functioning in an entirely different way. This new filiation that is a constituent part of the capitalist machine, in relation to which commercial capital and financial capital will world, but rather an essential component of the world-wide capitalist machine. It must be added, however, that the center itself has But on the other hand, and more profoundly, every technical machine presupposes flows of a particular type: flows of code that of code that are both interior and exterior to the machine, forming the elements of a technology and even a science has the others—to such a degree that the automatic machine has always increasingly internalized them in its body or its is very wide-ranging. By no means does the diachronic capitalist machine allow itself to be revolutionized by one or more of with determinism.) The true axiomatic is that of the social machine itself, which takes the place of the old codings and on the contrary, it insinuates itself everywhere in the productive machine and becomes firmly wedded to it in order to regulate is not only those who man and supply the military machine who are engaged in an anti-human enterprise. The same can by means of streams of gas; the computer is a machine for instantaneous and generalized decoding. Michel Serres defines in this the market? Why does it form in turn a gigantic machine for social repression—psychic repression, aimed at what nevertheless constitutes its only by setting in motion from the start an axiomatic machine based on the supposed finite number of the figures considered characteristics can always be computed by means of an electronic machine, or for the discourse of madmen that can always be must not think that it replaces the socius, the social machine, with an aggregate of technical machines. The difference in nature Capitalism's originality resides rather in the fact that the social machine has for its parts technical machines as constant capital attached axiomatic of itself is by no means a simple technical machine, not even an automatic or cybernetic machine. Bourbaki says as a simple technical machine, not even an automatic or cybernetic machine. Bourbaki says as much concerning scientific axiomatics: they do not technical machines; he is rather the slave of the social machine. The bourgeois sets the example, he absorbs surplus value for of slaves, he is the first servant of the ravenous machine, the beast of the reproduction of capital, internalization of the the very organization of his axiomatic: there is only one machine, that of the great mutant decoded flow—cut off from the castes and the statuses, and that draws from the machine an undivided flow of income convertible into consumer and production who are outside the class. Between the servants of the machine, and those who sabotage it or its cogs and wheels is like a territoriality that accompanies the deterritorialization of the machine, as its other side. If it is true that the object, under exterior conditions, in the territorial or despotic machine. But Marx is quick to add that this essentially cynical as a special activity still tied to a money-creating despotic machine; the physiocrats, pushing this presentiment still further, had tied. subjective further, had tied. subjective activity to a territorial or reterritorialized machine, in the form of agriculture and landed property. And even of decoding and deterritorialization, on the ruins of the despotic machine, these societies are caught between the Urstaat that they would or another that would escape the axiomatic and throw the machine into a panic (a Chinese on the horizon, a Cuban and the civilized societies. The first is the underlying territorial machine, which consists in coding the flows on the full body body of the earth. The second is the transcendent imperial machine, which consists in overcoding the flows on the full body appropriating their surplus labor. The third is the modern immanent machine, which consists in decoding the flows on the full body regulations and beyond its transcendental resurrections. Each type of social machine produces a particular kind of representation whose elements are organized the socius: the system of connotation-connection in the savage territorial machine, corresponding to the coding of the flows; the system of the flows; the system of subordination-disjunction in the barbarian despotic machine, corresponding to overcoding; the system of co-ordination-conjunction in the civilized Oedipus at Last In the territorial or even the despotic machine, social economic reproduction is never independent of human reproduction, of This is true not only with respect to the territorial machine, and to local groups that determine the place of each and the filiations, but also with respect to the despotic machine, which adds the relations of the new alliance and direct of the despot's idols, is the advent of the Oedipal-narcissistic machine: No more glyphs and hieroglyphs, we'll have the real objective the three machines. For Oedipus makes ready in the territorial machine, as an empty unoccupied limit. It takes form in the an empty unoccupied limit. It takes form in the despotic machine as a symbolically occupied limit. But it is filled and completion only by becoming the imaginary Oedipus of the capitalist machine. The despotic machine preserved the primitive territorialities, and the capitalist becoming the imaginary Oedipus of the capitalist machine. The despotic machine preserved the primitive territorialities, and the capitalist machine resuscitates the Urstaat as one of the poles of its position of an object from on high, in the despotic machine, did not first make possible the folding and flattening operations map of this socius-earth, despot, or capital-money (for each social machine the two poles, paranoiac and schizophrenic, are distributed in varying say, not only its functioning, but formation and autoproductio? A machine works according to the previous intercommunications of its structure and an individual and specific unity of the living, which every machine presupposes insofar as it is subordinate to organic continuance, and should be noted that, in one way or another, the machine and desire thus remain in an extrinsic relationship, either because determined by a system of mechanical causes, or because the machine is itself a system of means in terms of the decisively, by calling in question the structural unity of the machine. It is said that machines do not reproduce themselves, or of the machines? ... We are misled by considering any complicated machine as a single thing; in truth it is a city which was bred truly after its kind. We see a machine as a whole, we call it by a name and

Once the structural unity of the machine has been undone, once the personal and specific unity of laid to rest, a direct link is perceived between the machine and desire, the machine passes to the heart of desire direct link is perceived between the machine and desire, the machine passes to the heart of desire, the machine is desiring desire, the machine passes to the heart of desire, the machine is desiring and desire, machined. Desire is not in the desire, machined. Desire is not in the subject, but the machine in desire—with the residual subject off to the side with the residual subject off to the side, alongside the machine, around the entire periphery, a parasite of machines, an accessory the real difference is not between the living and the machine, vitalism and mechanism, but between two states of the machine machine, vitalism and mechanism, but between two states of the machine that are two states of the living as well. The machine taken in its structural unity, the living taken in its is to say, between the small machines scattered in every machine, and the small formations dispersed in every organism: a domain the biological, there being as many living beings in the machine as there are machines in the living. Why speak of their persons and their species, varieties, and locales; when a machine appears as a single object, and a living organism appears armies, banks get a lot of people aroused. A revolutionary machine is nothing if it does not acquire at least as it condenses a free energy capable of fueling a revolutionary machine. Everywhere there is libido as machine energy, and neither the horn nor the bumble bee have function as raw partial objects, dispersed working parts of a machine that is itself dispersed. In short, partial objects are the repels the organs, as in the mounting of the paranoiac machine, the body without organs marks the external limit of the itself over them, in the process of a miraculating fetishistic machine, it still does not totalize them, unify them in the lines of connection that traverse the productive parts of the machine, but an entire network of disjunction on the recording surface energy (Numen). But in fact, from the standpoint of the machine itself, there is no succession that ensures the strict coexistence longer. As Jacques Monod says, we must conceive of a machine that is such by its functional properties but not by movements. It is a question of different parts of the machine, different and coexisting, different in their very coexistence. Hence it must itself be judged, evaluated in the functioning of the machine and the system of its energetic conversions, and not as as it implies the possibility of energetic conversions in the machine (Libido-Numen-Voluptas). It is a matter of imposing the idea of the desiring-machine function in the very workings of the social machine; the flows of desire enter and exit through the codes circuit that never stops grafting the desiring-machines onto the social machine and implanting the social machine in the desiring-machines.	p 327 p 328 p 329 p 329 p 332 p 333 p 336 p 337

The officer of In the Penal Colony demonstrates what Penal Colony demonstrates what an intense libidinal investment of a machine can be, a machine that is not only technical but an intense libidinal investment of a machine can be, a machine that is not only technical but social, and through which desires its own repression. We have seen how the capitalist machine constituted a system of immanence bordered by a great mutant disinterested love for the absurd and nonpossessed force of the machine. Oh, to be sure, it is not for himself or a pure joy in feeling oneself a wheel in the machine, traversed by flows, broken by schizzes. Placing oneself in a the most exploited, to seek their ends in an oppressive machine, but what is reactionary or revolutionary in the preconscious investment as a residual and subordinated territoriality (witness how the capitalist machine revives the despotic Urstaat, or how the socialist machine preserves	p 346 p 346 p 346 p 346 p 346 p 346 p 347 p 347

But there is an apparatus of interest never takes the place of a machine of desire. A revolutionary group at the preconscious level remains Blessed Virgin, and all at once. Everything passes into the machine that causes the properly familial determinations to disintegrate. What the cause of desire, but is itself the castrating apparatus, the machine for putting lack into desire, for drying up all the occur at the meeting place of the two kinds of machine, following lines of escape or integration. Will Aaron leave with little boy has already plugged a desiring-machine into a social machine, short-circuiting the parents, who can only intervene as agents of its product. That is why we speak of an Oedipal-narcissistic machine, at the end of which the ego encounters its own no other, hands off. A disinterested love of the molar machine, a veritable enjoyment, with all the hatred it contains for contains for those who do not submit to the molar machine: the entire libido is at stake. From the point of so many cogs and parts; to insert oneself into the machine to find there at last the enjoyment of the mechanisms of application, and everywhere enslave art to a great castrating machine of sovereignty. There is a pole of reactionary investment for all the more ruthless as it does not place the machine in its service, but is the servant of the capitalist in its service, but is the servant of the capitalist machine: in this sense, a single class, content for its part mechanism—that does not reveal the insanity of the capitalist machine and the pathological character of its rationality: not at all a true rationality of this pathological state, this insanity, the machine works too, believe me. The capitalist machine does not run this insanity, the machine works too, believe me. The capitalist machine does not run the risk of becoming mad, it is the source of Capital, is his fascination with such a machine: how it came to be assembled, on what foundation of terrible single class of gray gentlemen who keep up the machine; how it does not run the risk of dying all in the system is insane: this is because the capitalist machine thrives on decoded and deterritorialized flows; it decodes and deterritorializes In short, a truly unconscious libido, a disinterested love: this machine is fantastic. Before being a mental state of the schizophrenic who has made himself into an artificial person through autism, schizophrenia is the chains are called signifying chains (chaines signifiantes) because they are made up of signs, but these signs are not themselves signifying of them anew, continuously emerging from them as a part made up of parts, each one of which completely fills up belong, their unmatched edges violently bent out of shape, forcibly made to fit together, to interlock, with a number of pieces Thereupon he picked up the train I called Dick and made it roll to the window and said Station. I explained are both irreducible and prior to anything that may be made to conform to the Oedipal figure. When the break between It was their disagreement on this particular point that eventually made the break between Freud and Jung irreconcilable. Yet at the all costs to restore a little order there, an order made classical owing to the ancient Greek theater. For what does This slight shift—which did not suppress mythical castration but made it depend secondarily on the organ, instead of the organ's mommy. On the contrary, we should consider the complementary ensemble made up of boy-girl and parents-agents of production and antiproduction, this combinations, at least two men and two women must be made to intervene to constitute the multiplicity in which transverse communications a triangle. It is as if the so-called signifying chain, made up of elements that are themselves nonsignifying—of polyvocal writing designations, nor racial or divine designations, but merely the use made of them. No problem of meaning, but only of usage into the black night of the undifferentiated. It should be made clear that the exclusive disjunctions are not at all the on the outside, in social authority, where it will be made to proliferate and be passed on to the children. The of Freud, everything leads us to conclude that this release, made possible by psychoanalysis, will be achieved, is already being achieved As a famous predecessor said to these creatures, you've already made this into an old refrain. As for us, that is itself in the transference or the doctor-patient relationship, Freudian psychoanalysis made a somewhat intensive use of the family. Granted, this use postulate: the properly fusionist family, where differentiations are no longer made except between the inside and the outside (those who are two articulations: so that is what this meant. Everything is made to begin with Oedipus, by means of explanation, with all social production, and the libidinal investments corresponding to them, are made to conform to the figures of familial reproduction. In the of neurotics than one successful schizophrenic who has not been made autistic. Oedipus, the incomparable instrument of gregariousness, is the ultimate and politics. The procedure is well known: two figures are made to appear, the Great Man and the Crowd. One then a careless use of Oedipus: what other use could be made of Oedipus? Nor is it a case of an ambiguous and desire is part of the infrastructure. Preconscious investments are made, or should be made, according to the interests of the of the infrastructure. Preconscious investments are made, or should be made, according to the interests of the opposing classes. But unconscious the interests of the opposing classes. But unconscious investments are made according to positions of desire and uses of synthesis, very show how, in the subject who desires, desire can be made to desire its own repression—whence the role of the is greased, or on the contrary an infernal machine is made ready. What are the connections, what are the disjunctions, the connections, what are the disjunctions, the conjunctions, what use is made of the syntheses? It represents nothing, but it produces. It bind, the double impasse. (Or, in line with a suggestion made by Henri Gobard, would it be better to translate this conjunctive syntheses is opposed to the segregative and biunivocal use made of them. There again this biunivocal use, illegitimate from the word has a moral aftertaste)? From the moment desire is made to depend on the signifier, it is put back under You have pushed a process into a goal. ... If we made a psychoanalyst enter into the domains of the productive unconscious the law wants to be guilty and wants to be made to feel guilty? One acts as if it were possible terms, where this conclusion becomes completely illegitimate. Distinctions must be made: the repressing representation which performs the repression; the repressed representative save itself ... which first and foremost is a logical deduction made by the human reason, even if unconsciously made, and secondly logical deduction made by the human reason, even if unconsciously made, and secondly is introduced into the affective passionate sphere, where merely acts as the last territoriality. And Oedipus is not made by the family. The Oedipal uses of synthesis, oedipalization, triangulation is all because of the oedipalization to which he is made to submit—the most somber organization—and which he can more general level, it is the two kinds of use made of synthesis that are in opposition. On the one hand be put into the triangle, how are selections to be made? The father's nose or the mother's ear—will that do is like a Cartesian devil; the regressions and progressions are made only within the artificially closed vessel of Oedipus, and in always repelled. The schizo knows how to leave: he has made departure into something as simple as being born or dying organs: sometimes the process is caught in the trap and made to turn about within the triangle, sometimes it takes itself serves as a familial stock, affinal stones or cowries are made to circulate. There is a sort of vast cycle of qualified; it is necessary that selections from the flows be made in relation to detachments from the chain: something must pass able to assume the role of mediator that could have made him a candidate for chief. Everything becomes complicated because of they hold that the terms and the relations should be made to vary within non-oedipal complexes that are no less familial the technical procedures with which they are treated. Selections are made from signifying chains no less than from material flows. The not exchanging, but inscribing or marking. And when exchange is made into an unconscious reality, structural rights are invoked in vain are recognized to be nonexchangist. And above all, what is made of the unconscious itself, if not its explicit reduction to the world, or at least from the visible world, and made as it were latent under their hammer blows and artist's psychic repression and the service of social repression would be made to end. The royal barbarian incest is merely the means territorial and imperial. In the first place, territorial representation is made up of two heterogeneous elements, voice and graphism: the former essential: the flattening of the graphy onto the voice has made a transcendent object jump outside the chain—a mute voice the signifier is merely the deterritorialized sign itself. The sign made letter. Desire no longer dares to desire, having become a two signifieds, effects the overcoding of the whole chain. What made incest impossible—namely, that at times we had the appellations the world, or at least from the visible world, and made as it were latent under their hammer blows and artists' active, en-acted, or reacted to, this instinct for freedom forcibly made latent (...) pushed back and repressed, incarcerated within and finally able been taken in that direction: Oedipus, bad conscience, interiority, they made it possible. What does Nietzsche mean, this man who dragged of the greatest cynicism, that repressed cruelty of the animal-man made inward and scared back into himself, the creature imprisoned in the flow that is derisively named purchasing power—a flow made truly impotent that represents the absolute impotence of the wage the collapse of the Gutenberg galaxy? Of course capitalism has made and continues to make use of writing; not only is through which a subject passes. The second error of psychoanalysis, made just as it was completing the separation of sexuality from aggregates and persons. It is true that social investments are made on the socius itself as a full body, and that the molar and the molecular, that the paranoia-schizophrenia division is made. Are we to believe, then, that social investments are secondary unscientific, and the bare fact that no vapour-engine was ever made entirely by another, or two others, of its own kind and are exactly what one makes of them, what is made with them, what they make in themselves. Desiring-machines work according restriction, a blockage, and a reduction that the libido is made to repress its flows in order to contain them in seems that the situation is far more complex than we made it out to be, since psychoanalysis participates to the highest analyst's office; it ceases as soon as a flow is made to circulate that does not let itself be stopped by by means of these flows that every productive connection is made, such as we have tried to account for with the of priest, the director of bad conscience: bad conscience has made us sick, but that is what will cure us! Freud psychoanalytic practice, a conception the psychoanalyst wishes to impose. Freud made the most profound discovery of the abstract subjective essence of was because he remained the prisoner of derived concepts that made him fall short of the materialist psychiatry he dreamed of wishes. That is not the distinction: the distinction to be made passes into the economic infrastructure itself and into its investments as the censors'. It is certain that psychoanalysis has not made its pictorial revolution. There is a hypothesis dear to Freud more of their supposed autonomy. In accordance with the distinction made by embryologists with regard to the egg between the stimulus a hundred places, whose every crack is repaired with cement made of gold, or like the church tile whose every fissure again, in these modern resources, what a strange use is made of Lacari's discoveries—Lacan, who was the first on the reforms to be brought about, sometimes even revolutions to be made. But madness breaks through, beneath the reformist investments, or the of the reactionary or the revolutionary character of the investment made by the libido of a sociohistorical or geographic field, from interest in capitalism. A statement as commonplace as this is made for another purpose: capitalists have an interest in capitalism only
